AN ESSAY ON THE POSITION OF THE BRITISH GENTRY.

* * For the following appropriate Essay on the "Landed Gentry," I am indebted to my friend, the Rev. John Hamilton Gray, of Carntyne, Vicar of Bolsover, county of Derby.

WE constantly hear it, with truth, asserted that among the families of the untitled gentry of Great Britain there are many more ancient than the majority of those which have been elevated to the peerage. But stronger language might, with equal truth, assert that the nobility of Great Britain is inadequately represented by the peerage; and that blood, not only most ancient, but most noble, flows in the veins of many who are not descended, either paternally or maternally, for many generations, from any ancestor that has borne a title. Within the last few centuries, the word nobility has been misapplied to signify exclusively those persons who have been raised to the peerage, and their immediate families. And the multitude of races of the ancient aristocracy which exist throughout England, without having ever been decorated with titles, together with the more remote cadets of the families of peers, have gradually lost the tradition of nobility, and, under the name of Commoners, have been confounded with those of recent origin, who, in later times, have risen to wealth.

This restriction of the epithet noble, according to an abuse of terms, to the members of the peerage mattered comparatively little to Englishmen, isolated, as they have for the most part been during later generations, from their continental neighbours. Because, in the various circles of English society, from the court down to the most provincial town, the claim to consideration of the ancient untitled gentry was acknowledged without question. And the constant marrying and giving in marriage between them and the peerage proved that, however erring the use of the terms Noble and Commoner might have become, the truth was recognized, in fact, although it was not expressed in words, viz., that the well-born English gentleman was in fact a nobleman. But in our intercourse with the nations of the continent this insular confusion of terms is fraught with great inconvenience; and it is much to be desired that both foreigners and Englishmen should take a true view of the case.

We are zealous in asserting that England is the first nation under the sun, that the English aristocracy stands pre-eminent above that of every other country, and that the English gentleman is the most perfect type of the civilized, educated, honourable, and manly character. The well-born, well-educated, and affluent Englishman is apt to indulge in a feeling of self-gratulation and conscious superiority when he compares his qualifications and advantages with those possessed by his continental neighbours; and he may almost be excused, if he is unable wholly to repress the pride which leads him internally to call on the Frenchman, Italian, or German to "stand back, for I am better than thou art." This feeling is modified, and its expression is repressed by a continued intercourse with the polished society of various nations. But we should be sorry to think that its existence was not fully justified by the high standing of the English gentleman among the men of rank, fortune, and education of every country in Europe.

But while the Englishman is disposed to arrogate to himself his full share of honour, and to demand a place higher than his neighbours are always willing to concede to him, it must, on the other hand, be admitted that he is generally strangely ignorant of the real station which he holds in respect to the society with which he is in the habit of mixing on the continent. And while he is too ready to claim for himself, individually and personally, an overweening share of social consideration, he is, at the same time, ignorant of the real position held by the class to which he belongs.

While, with a full purse and broad acres, the home-bred English squire is disposed to undervalue the high-sounding titles of the German Count, the French Vicomte, or the Italian Marchese, he is, at the same time, in ignorance of his own proper station, too ready to admit that, in point of birth and rank, they stand above him. Thus with "insular pride" and "insular blindness," he, at once, undervalues and overvalues those with whom he is brought into contact in continental circles; and not knowing his own right place, he is a puzzle to the nobility of the country where he happens to sojourn, who do not know what to make of the haughty pretensions of this man, who, after all, frankly proclaims himself to be a commoner, not a nobleman, and consequently to belong to what they call the "Bourgeoisie," the "Roture."

The fact is, that Englishmen, during the last few centuries, have been, from various causes, political, religious, and social, very much wrapped up in insular isolation, and have lost the place which was once assigned to them in the great European family. And the descendants of great and noble knights, who gained honour in French and German tournaments, and whose offshoots were received with open arms into the most exclusive of the orders of religious chivalry, have lost their footing among the aristocracy of the continent, and would, with ignorant conscientiousness, repudiate any claim to be reckoned as noble.

Many causes have contributed to make Englishmen forgetful of their proper position. The law of primogeniture has kept titles and great estates in the hands of a few; and has established a barrier of separation between the eldest branch of noble families and their cadets. While the Duke, Earl, or Baron has handed down his coronet, his rank and his political privileges, along with his wealth, from generation to generation in one favoured line, the younger branches have gradually descended to the common level; and excepting the preservation of a tradition that they are of an ancient and good family, they differ in nothing from the multitudes around them. In this country, high-sounding titles and great political privileges, being in the hands of a few, the fortunate holders of these advantages have become surrounded with a peculiar halo, and have gradually appropriated to themselves, and have received from others, the exclusive distinction of nobility. So that it would probably greatly astonish the lord paramount of an English county to be told by one of his neighbouring squires, or even by a remote cadet of his own family, that they were quite as noble as himself; that he might, indeed, be their superior in rank and in illustration, but that his nobility was not more real or ancient than their own.

Another cause, it must freely be admitted even by the most strenuous asserters of the nobility of the British Gentry, has tended greatly to complicate their position; and that is the tendency which has existed in England, from time immemorial, on the part of men who have risen from humble rank to wealth, to consolidate that wealth on landed possessions, and to establish themselves among the territorial aristocracy of the country.

This desire of acquiring an estate and founding a family does not exist in the same degree among those who have risen to wealth in the countries of the continent. Exceptions do, indeed, occur; but they are mere exceptions. A rich Frankfort banker, or Hamburg merchant, does not in general invest his gains in land. He may live luxuriously, and gratify his tastes with houses, gardens, full cellars, and paintings; but his investments are chiefly in personal property, which at his death can be easily and equally divided among his children. He seldom thinks of acquiring land; and still less of endeavouring to obtain nobility and found a Majorat in favour of his eldest son. And unless he became noble and executed an entail, or created a Majorat, the purchase of land would be, in his case, a small satisfaction; because at his death it would have to be sold, in order to be equally divided among his children. Now, the conduct of the rich merchant of London, or Manchester, or Glasgow is almost invariably the very opposite of this. As soon as he has realised a good fortune by trade, it is his ambition to become a country gentleman, and to endeavour to find a place among some county aristocracy. And as, in this country, the ancient gentry and the remote cadets of the highest peers' families have gradually ceased to call themselves noble, our wealthy merchant has a less difficult task to accomplish than one of the same class would have in Germany or Italy. His efforts to obtain a footing are generally successful, and the next generation sees the son or grandson of the Liverpool or Manchester trader, associated with, and even allied to, the most ancient houses, which were distinguished in the wars of the Roses or of the Barons. There is scarcely a peer, however exalted his station may be, who has not some degree of family connection with very new men; and not a few of the most influential statesmen who have done honour to England are but one remove from the manufactory or the counting-house, and that oftentimes through the intermediate step of a trader turned country squire. In this country no conventional barrier impedes the admission of a family just risen from among the people into the ranks of the aristocracy; and when once there, they are generally found to be among the most exclusive preservers of the footing which they have acquired; and their wealth is centred on their eldest sons. This rich, flourishing, and popular aristocracy exhibits a singular contrast to the often poverty-stricken nobility of continental Europe, which, on the one hand, rarely admits of accessions from the people, and on the other, fritters away its possessions by subdivisions of titles and estates among every branch of its race, however remote.

One of the most remarkable exceptions to what has been asserted of the rare admission of mercantile families into the ranks of the continental aristocracy is Torlonia of Rome. The late Duke of Bracciano began life as an assistant to his father in the humble occupation of "boots" to the couriers who attended rich foreign travellers to Rome; and by talent, industry, and rare good fortune, this man died possessed of a Roman Dukedom. His daughters were married to the heads of the great houses of Orsini and Marescotti; and his sons married the daughters of Sforza-Cesarini and Colonna.

But while the English gentry hold out their hands to welcome the races of wealthy traders who anxiously seek for admission into their ranks, and who bring their great riches to add to the influence and importance of county aristocracies, a very different feeling of class antagonism pervades continental society. If the noble shrinks from contact with the trader, he, on his side, regards with no cordial feeling a connection with the nobility.

In illustration of this, we may mention what was said many years ago by a man of European celebrity* in the diplomacy of one of the first continental states, who was himself then a bourgeois, but has since been admitted to the nobility, and held a distinguished rank in his own country:—"My Sovereign," said he, "has offered to make me noble, and give me a title. I have hitherto declined the honour, but, one day, I shall accept it. However, if I wish my sons to marry rich German wives, I must make haste. While I am a bourgeois, with the position I hold as an ambassador and a man of a certain degree of celebrity, it is probable that they might now be welcome sons-in-law to the wealthiest of our mercantile families. But their chance is over as soon as I become a Baron. Such is the dislike of our bourgeoisie for the nobility!" The words of this distinguished man are stated just as they were spoken, and they describe a feeling perfectly true in Germany, however incomprehensible it may be to English ideas, and however contrary to the almost proverbial advice to a poor Lord to go into the City to pick up a heiress.

But it is well for England that industry, good character, and ability may raise a poor man to a place among the gentry of the country, and that, in another generation, his family may become influential, not only from wealth, but from high alliances. It is the safeguard of English institutions that admission to the aristocracy is not exclusively barred against the ambition of a man of humble birth, and that a place there, when once gained, is jealously guarded by the right of primogeniture.

But while we are claiming for the English gentry a place among the continental nobility, it seems only fair at the outset to confess the principal circumstance which complicates the question; and that is, that in England, among the most ancient and noble of the gentry, others are admitted to take equal rank whose claims to consideration are comparatively recent, and both (being untitled) are with difficulty distinguished the one from the other, unless the skill of heralds and the lore of genealogists are brought into requisition.

Having now, once for all, made the admission that among the English gentry many are to be found who cannot boast of a long line of ancestors, we must proceed to the vindication of the claim of the untitled aristocracy of Great Britain, as a class, to be placed upon a footing with those families on the continent who are reckoned noble. And as high-sounding titles are multiplied ad infinitum among the junior branches of the continental nobility, and in this country are restricted to one in each family, it follows that very many of the plain untitled English gentry are, in blood, to say the least, upon an equality with German Counts and Italian Marquises. Mr. Howard, of Corbey, is as noble as his chief, the Duke of Norfolk, Mr. Hamilton, of Raploch, is as noble as his chief, the Duke of Hamilton; and in France, Germany or Italy they would be decorated with imposing titles. Moreover, many ancient families, which in this country are untitled, would, on the continent, where such honors have been much more lavishly bestowed, have attained to titles which here are the exclusive concomitants of peerages. Dundas of Dundas, had an Earldom conferred upon him in the 15th century; but the monarch who conferred it was dethroned before the patent was made out, and his successor would not acknowledge the claim. Subsequently three cadets of his family have been raised to the peerage; yet he himself continues what is called a commoner, while his younger branches are what is called noble! Such is the erroneous mode of expression whereby the nobility of the English Gentry has been suffered to fall into abeyance. Really, Dundas and all his branches are equally noble; but he is untitled, while several of them are titled.

When we look back to the annals of past times both in England and in Scotland, we find many instances of Princesses, daughters, sisters, and nieces of Kings, being given in marriage to gentlemen whose highest title was that of knighthood. Are we to suppose that those persons who were thus accounted worthy of a royal alliance were not noble? There is now a Scottish gentleman of a very ancient race, but one that has never been raised to the peerage, and who, according to modern English perversion of terms, is not a nobleman (Sir Archibald Edmonstone) whose ancestors, in two successive generations, matched with the Royal family of Scotland. The daughters of King Robert II. and King Robert III. both married into the family of Edmonstone; and the husband of the latter princess was, moreover, a younger son.

Those gentlemen who were accounted worthy to become the sons-in-law of Kings must needs have been noble in the 14th and 15th centuries. How comes it, then, that their descendants, heirs of those Royal marriages, should in the 19th century have lost their nobility?

In the year 1100, William de Candela was a free Baron, and Lord of Anstruther in the county of Fife. Unlike most of the ancient proprietors of great Scottish estates, he did not assume the name of his lands. He was already the possessor of a noble family name. In a subsequent generation his descendant, in compliance with the custom of his cotemporaries, adopted the name of his lands as a surname, and became de Anstruther. His descendants were never raised to the peerage, and they continue to this day Commoners. But are they not noble, as their ancestor was in the year 1100?

One of the most ancient families of the Scottish untitled nobility was Innes of Innes. The late head of this house, Sir James Innes, became, by female succession, Duke of Roxburghe. Here was not an instance of a roturier suddenly raised to the highest order of the nobility. It was a noble raised to the highest rank in the peerage.

If we assume some particular date as our test of antiquity, it will be interesting to inquire what number of existing English peers were then proprietors of land in England. We will not go back to remote antiquity, and we will not inquire into the extent of the land then possessed by the ancestors of existing peers. We will take as the date the year 1500, when we shall find the ancestors of many of our peers to have been very obscure country gentlemen. But what we want to ascertain is, how many peers had ancestors in the direct male line who were landowners at the beginning of the 16th century? They are as follows:—

Dukes—Norfolk, Somerset, Marlborough, Devonshire, Buckingham, Bedford, Rutland, Sutherland, Newcastle.

Marquises—Winchester, Cholmeley, Westminster, Townshend, Bath, Bristol, Northampton, Hastings.

Earls—Shrewsbury, Harewood, Fitzwilliam, Mexborough, Warwick, Lonsdale, Ferrers, Denbigh, Egmont, Stradbrook, Ashburnham, Chichester, Delawar, Portsmouth, Powis, Jersey, Grey, Chesterfield, Westmoreland, Orford, Derby, Stamford, Harborough, Abergavenny, Winchelsea, Waldegrave, Berkeley, Sefton, Powlett, Devon, Clarendon.

Viscounts—Hereford, Combermere, Falmouth, Hill, Gage.

Lords—Camoy, Hastings, Ribblesdale, Stourton, Wrottesley, Bagot, Forester, Wenlock, Byron, Middleton, Walsingham, Stafford, Monson, Wodehouse, Teynham, Leigh, Poltimore, Digby, Clifford, Vernon, Scarsdale, St. John.

The ancestors of these seventy-five peers were proprietors of land in the year 1500. This number, although considerable, forms but a small proportion of the existing peerage; and it also forms a small proportion of the existing landowners holding the rank of country gentlemen, whose ancestors were landed proprietors in the year 1500. Thus, an immense majority of the existing peers are mere mushrooms when compared with a large proportion of our country gentry, who are much better entitled to be considered noble, because their families were established as a county aristocracy at a date when their lordships' ancestors did not possess one acre of land.

If the same test of possession of landed property in the year 1500 be applied to the Scottish peerage, they will be found to stand it much better than their English brethren. For, from their whole number, probably only two families—Hope and Primrose—are unable to connect themselves with territorial possessions, of a greater or less extent, at that period. The Scottish peerage is much better entitled than that of England to be regarded as the cream and the flower of the national nobility; and whatever may be said on behalf of the nobility of the English gentry applies with infinitely greater force to the Scottish.

In Scotland a much larger proportion of county families than in England are the cadets of the most illustrious Houses—Douglasses, Stewarts, Hamiltons, Gordons, Campbells, Grahams, and other names high in the peerage are spread over the length and breadth of the country as proprietors of landed estates; and according to the true and continental sense of nobility, every branch is as noble as its root. Moreover, among the families which have not attained to the peerage, there are very many, as will be hereafter shown, who, from the earliest times, held the rank of Barons, Lords of a Barony; and were, in fact, peers sitting in parliament. In after times, commencing with the reign of King JAMES I. of Scotland, the number of these free Barons sitting in Parliament became limited to those who were summoned to sit as Lords of Parliament. But this was an innovation. In early times Colquhoun, Anstruther, Innes, Swinton, or Edmonstone, were, to all intents, the equals of Forbes, Lindsay, Gray, Hepburn, or Home, and held the same original position as Barons of Scotland. The latter class came to be Lords of Parliament, while the former continued mere Lords of Baronies. But these, with their younger branches, constitute a large proportion of the more ancient landed gentry of Scotland.

SECTION II.

It has been often said by foreigners, either from malice or through ignorance, that the only nobility in England is the peerage. This assertion, though doubtless gratifying to the nobles of those countries where the desire is to lower and humble the "perfidious Albion," is no less unfounded than it is derogatory to the English Gentry and to the Peers themselves. If Viscount Combermere or Lord Wrottesley date their nobility only from the patents of their peerages, they must, indeed, be mere mushrooms. But the fact is that, as in the cases above-mentioned, many of the newest peers possess the oldest pedigrees, and after having been, for ages, enrolled in the lists of the noble British Gentry, they are, at length, raised to a higher rank in that nobility, and to certain political privileges which they did not previously enjoy.

There have been instances of English country gentlemen of station and family who, upon refusing a peerage, have thought that they made a most magnanimous speech when they declared that they preferred being an ancient squire to being a modern peer. This sentiment, however, is simply ignorant nonsense. There may be many sufficient reasons which render elevation to the peerage inexpedient; but most certainly one of them need never be pride of lineage. A peer of yesterday is not, on that account, the less an ancient gentleman, if he was one before; and the dignity of the peerage, however much and justly it may elevate a man of humble birth in the scale of society, can never make him a gentleman in blood. King James the First of Great Britain pithily said of an obscure aspirant after gentility, "I can make him a Lord, but I cannot make him a gentleman."

Our neighbours on the continent are very apt to indulge in a sneer at our confining our estimate of nobility to the peerage; and they glory in the comparatively modern date of many of the creations in that illustrious body. But in one of the principal countries of the continent, viz., France, the number of nobles before the revolution was reckoned at 365,000, and many of these were of the most obscure station, as well as recent origin. There, and indeed in other continental countries, titles have no corresponding duties and responsibilities attached to them, as in England, and they are vulgarised from being transmitted, as mere titles, to cadet branches of a family.

In France, titles have been especially depressed, because during the last two centuries the French noblesse have taken such as they chose (always excepting that of Duke which was subjected to more strict rules); and although those titles have been recognised by the courtesy of society, still the effect of this extraordinary licence has been to lower the estimate of such honorary distinctions, even in the case of those which were lawfully granted. There is no doubt that many French Marquises and Counts derived their titles and family honours direct from the Crown. But we apprehend that these were few in number when compared with those which owed their origin to pure assumption. For instance, if an estate was purchased which had belonged to a titled family, the purchaser was in the habit of transferring to himself the honours of his predecessor. And titles and nobility were often affected on even much less substantial grounds. Molière described a true state of the society of his age and country when he introduces in one of his most witty comedies the wealthy bourgeois, George Dandin, assuming the airs and honours of nobility as M. De la Dandinère. Such abuses had risen to an unprecedented height in the reign of Louis XV., who endeavoured unsuccessfully to put a stop to them. Since then the political vicissitudes of France have sufficiently engrossed the attention of its successive rulers, whether Royal or Imperial, to leave no time for such occupations. It remains to be seen whether a fourth dynasty has now begun, which, from its duration and strength, may succeed where a Bourbon has failed.

It is, however, a fact that these impudent assumptions on the part of upstart French families did not affect the true nobility of the old French Houses. We have already said that the honours of Ducal rank were held sacred, and could never be assumed without a right recognised by the Crown; but the inferior titles of Marquis, Count, Viscount, and Baron, may be said, all, to have ranked on the same footing; the higher or lower consideration in which they were held depending not on the degree of the title, but on its known antiquity, and on the ancestral illustration of him who bore it. During the last fifty years the titles of Marquis and Viscount have gained a good deal of consideration in France; for they in general imply a nobility of at least two generations, no such titles having been conferred during the Empire, nor, as we believe, under Louis Philippe. We are uncertain whether Louis XVIII. or Charles X. created either Marquises or Viscounts; but we believe these two titles to belong exclusively to the old regime.

The French monarchs before the revolution were reduced to the necessity of taking measures of self-defence against the insolent assumption of high-sounding titles by upstarts and adventurers. In order to create a principle of discrimination entirely apart from those really paltry titular distinctions, the Bourbon Kings established a rule that no one should be admitted to the Royal hunting parties who could not prove his nobility as far back as the year 1400. Then the green glades of the Royal forests were made the select scenes of aristocratic exclusiveness, when the drawing-room had failed in being so. And this criterion in some measure answered its end by repressing presumptuous parvenus; at the same time that it undoubtedly kept back many who did not deserve to be excluded. For it is extraordinary what a number of well-known and illustrious French families were wholly unable to meet this test.

When we compare our British nobility with the motley rabble who were dignified with this epithet in France, we may consider ourselves modest in our pretensions. According to a statement produced in 1798, when the subject of armorial bearings was before the British Parliament, there were found to be 9,458 English families, and 4,000 Scottish ones, entitled to bear coats of arms, all of which families are, strictly speaking, noble. "Nobiles," says Sir Edward Coke, "sunt qui arma gentilitia antecessorum suorum proferre possunt."

When a sovereign wished to reward one of humble rank he gave him a patent of nobility, and in that patent were blazoned the arms which were henceforth to distinguish his shield. Every noble had a shield of arms, and hence arms became the criterion of nobility; and in every country a grant of arms to any one confers nobility on his descendants. In some countries of the continent, such as Germany, Sweden, Denmark, and Russia, titles, in like manner, descend to the younger branches, and to the unmarried daughters of families. In Italy the titles which have been conferred by the German Emperor follow the German rule, while the titles of Prince or Duke, conferred by the Pope and the King of Naples, belong only to the eldest son, the younger branches styling themselves "dei Duchi," "dei Principi." In France the same title was not, indeed, shared by all the sons of a family. But each assumed some honorary distinction from one or other of their estates. For instance, if the father was Marquis of A, his eldest son was perhaps Count, with the same or a different designation. The second son was Vicomte de C, and the third son was Chevalier or Baron de D. This habit of assigning different designations to various members of the same family (and that much more arbitrarily than is the case with ourselves) produces much confusion in French domestic annals, and even in general history. In Spain and in Portugal the superior titles of the high nobility are confined to the eldest son. But in every European country the cadets of those noble houses, whether or not they possess the same titles and privileges with the elder branch, are not less noble than the heads of their respective houses.

The great families of Venice give us the example of the most ancient nobility in the world without title or honorary distinction. In the year 697, twelve illustrious citizens met together in order to elect a sovereign of the Venetian Republic; and these were Contarini, Morosi, Badoaro, Tiepolo, Michieli, Sanudo, Gradenigo, Memmo, Falieri, Dandolo, Polani, and Barozzi, the heads of the greatest houses in the State of Venice during its infancy, and several of whom are represented by descendants in the male line in our own day. Thus we find nobles of an antiquity of twelve centuries who have not, and who never have had, that which, according to the vulgar English estimate, is essential to nobility, viz., a title, or handle to the name.

All the real old indigenous families of the Republic were untitled. Where titled names were inscribed in the Libro d'Oro, they belonged to illustrious foreigners, on whom the Republic deigned to confer a mark of consideration, or to titled nobles of the terra firma, who had become subjects of Saint Mark. It has been remarked that the last Doge Manini, the craven, who, without a struggle, yielded up to the foe his splendid trust, was the first sovereign of the glorious republic who was not of an ancient house; and he was, moreover, the first who bore the title of Count.

Any foreigner who is familiar with the history and institutions of Venice must be well aware that the most illustrious nobility can be handed down for twelve centuries without the adventitious aid of title. And it only requires an acquaintance with the details of English county history to be convinced that many of the families of our untitled gentry can boast of a nobility as ancient as any that exists in France and Germany. We yield, doubtless in common with every European State, the palm of antiquity to Venice. And the freedom and equality of our social institutions forbid the exclusive strictness of a Libro d'Oro. But in every county in Great Britain we have a vast body of ancient native nobility. And it would be difficult for either France or Germany to rival the claims of a Clifton, a Wake, a Dundas, a Meynell, a Swinburne, a Wolseley, a Burdett, a Legh, a Wynne, a Riddell, a Kirkpatrick, a Welby, or a Gresley. Are not the male heirs of Ferrers, Earl of Derby, and Dunbar, Earl of March, noble, although they have been untitled for centuries? What nobility can surpass the twenty-one knightly and baronial generations of Anstruther? And could any title of the peerage add to the nobility of him, upon whose tomb is inscribed, "John Hampden, twenty-fourth hereditary Lord of Great Hampden?"

The English gentry gave many knights to the noble order of the Temple in ancient times. And before the abolition of the "Langue d'Angleterre" at the Reformation, every English gentleman of four quarters of gentility was admissible into the Order of St. John of Jerusalem. The English knights were chosen among the gentry, and the prior had a seat in the House of Lords. The German knights were chosen among the barons or "nobiles minores," and the prior of Germany had a seat in the Diet of the Empire. The untitled British gentry have been distinguished as field-marsals, generals, and admirals. They have held noble posts near the person of their sovereign; and they have represented that sovereign as ambassadors at the most illustrious foreign courts. They have been admitted into the highest orders of chivalry; and we find them among the founders of the Garter. They, therefore, possess all the essential characteristics of nobility; and they may, in all respects, be considered as on a par with the "noblesse" of the continent.

An unintentional injury has been inflicted on the gentry of Britain by the great lexicographer: unintentional truly, because Samuel Johnson was a friend to aristocratic institutions, and an admirer of ancestral distinctions. Yet being neither antiquary nor herald, he has fallen into the blunder, so common in England during the last two centuries, of confounding nobility with the peerage. In his dictionary he defines a gentleman to be "one of good extraction, but not noble." The translation of this great work into foreign languages has confused the ideas of foreigners on the subject of the social position of the British gentry. An earlier lexicographer, Bailey, has given a much more correct definition of gentleman, as "one who has received nobility from his ancestors, and not from the gift of any prince or state."

As among the higher nobility, we have different degrees marked by the various ranks in the peerage; so in the lower nobility or gentry we have several distinctions, such as Baronets, Knights, Esquires, and Gentlemen.

The honour of knighthood, which was so highly prized in the days of our Plantagenet and Tudor sovereigns, has now essentially lost its imposing character, being very frequently conferred on the chief magistrates of towns. It is, however, not confined to such, as it is given to judges, and to persons of distinction in science or literature; and it is frequently borne by officers in the army or navy who have received an order of knighthood from a foreign sovereign. It is also officially and honourably held by the most distinguished officers in the Heralds' Colleges, such as the Garter King-at-Arms, and the Ulster King-at-Arms. But when a distinction under that of the peerage is conferred, now-a-days, on a country gentleman, he is not knighted, as was the case some centuries ago, but is made a Baronet.

This hereditary order of knighthood very much puzzles our continental neighbours; and it is a distinction exclusively confined to Great Britain and Ireland. Like the peerage, the dignity of Baronet has often been made the object of ignorant sneers. An ancient gentleman considers it a degradation to become a new Baronet! He forgets, however, that upon becoming a Baronet of recent creation, he does not cease to be a gentleman of ancient nobility; and although it is true that he may share this dignity, such as it is, with some who are of much less ancient and noble lineage than his own; yet this is no more than befalls him every day in his life, when, as a country 'squire, he sits on the same Bench, and at the same Board with neighbouring 'squires who hold as good a social place as himself, though they possess much shorter pedigrees.

At the same time, there is no doubt that the dignity of Baronet has, from the period of its institution, been especially coveted by new men, who thereby obtained a footing in society and established their families on a somewhat higher grade than would have been conceded to them without such an adventitious distinction. The feelings occasioned among the older Scottish gentry by the institution of the Order of Nova Scotia Baronets was thus expressed in a couplet of the 17th century:—

Your servant, Sir James, your servant, Sir John!
Noble knights every one!
Thanks to our sovereigns, James and Charles,
Those now are knights who once were Carles!

Another distinction among the gentry or minor nobility is that of Esquire, which has degenerated into the usual mode of addressing every reputable tradesman, and is abused so as to have lost its real meaning. One is often struck in examining family records of the 16th, 17th, and even the 18th centuries, such as monumental inscriptions, by perceiving the intermarriages of members of the same family sometimes with persons who are styled "Esquire," and sometimes with persons who are styled "Gentleman." The "Esquire" and the "Gentleman" were evidently different, and never were confounded together; at the same time they clearly belonged to the same grade of society: one generation of an ancient and honourable house intermarrying with the daughter of an "Esquire," and the next generation intermarrying with the daughter of a "Gentleman;" and, in like manner, two sisters, daughters of the same family, marrying the one a "Gentleman," and the other an "Esquire."

It would seem that according to the original meaning of the terms, "Gentleman" denoted a rank derived from birth, while "Esquire" denoted one derived from office. Legally, according to the heraldic definitions of the two or three last centuries, some men are ex-officio esquires who are not, strictly speaking, by birth gentlemen; and, on the other hand, some men are ancient gentlemen who have not the official rank of esquire. County magistrates, for the time being, and high sheriffs of counties, for life, are all officially esquires; and yet persons holding those situations may be of inferior birth, not entitled to bear coat armour, and thus not in the continental sense, noble; in tact, not gentlemen. Whereas some of the best blood in England may neither have been put on the commission of the peace nor have been nominated high sheriffs, nor have officiated as esquires to Knights of the Bath; nor have, in short, occupied any position which imparted to them the rank of esquire. A "gentleman" is by blood superior to an "esquire," while an "esquire" by office holds a rank above a "gentleman." The "esquire" was, in its primitive sense, the shield-bearer to a knight. Baron, knight, and esquire may be said to have marked different degrees within the class of gentry or nobility. "Gentleman" was a more comprehensive title than "Esquire," and marked the whole of that minor nobility to which both knights and esquires originally belonged. But time and usage have worked such confusion that it is difficult to say whether gentleman or esquire is the more honourable designation. In recent times, "gentleman" has been bestowed as a designation on persons of the middle rank, who were as little entitled to receive it as that of esquire. While in our own day esquire is liberally conferred upon every man who is not actually standing behind the counter of a shop.

Such is the natural consequence of the want of a strict line of demarcation in English society, like that which we still see preserved in some measure on the continent. For although a Torlonia or a Grazioli may have been raised from the bank-counter and the bakehouse to dukedoms, it must be owned even by the most resolute defenders of the nobility of the British gentry, that in this country one class treads fast on the heels of another, which produces an uneasy state of society, socially displeasing, although politically safe.

No one but an Englishman, or one who has seen much of English social life, can comprehend the extraordinary nuances of society in this country. Those who from birth, fortune, and external position, would seem to be of exactly the same grade, may yet be separated, the one from the other, by a gulf which is almost impassable. We have known two peeresses who were intimately acquainted with each other in early youth, live for fifty years in London without having any intercourse, and scarcely ever meeting; and yet both lived much in good society, and their separation was caused neither by disagreement, nor by religious or political exclusiveness. The reason was that the one moved in a somewhat higher circle of the great world than the other.

In like manner, we have known a Duchess, no less distinguished for her worth than for her illustrious title, who, in the palmy days of the exclusiveness of Almac's, was refused a ticket by the patronesses, the most influential of whom remarked, "The Duchess of ——— must learn that rank does not constitute fashion!!" This is probably the only country in the world in which "a high and mighty princess" would meet with such treatment.

And this exclusiveness may be considered as one of the causes of the confusion of ranks amongst us. Fashion, not rank, as the great lady of Almac's truly said, constitutes an imperium in imperio, an enviable position, which may be attained it is difficult to say how; but to which rank or wealth cannot be said, with certainty, to open the door. And however insolent and overbearing fashion may be, it is still one of the safety-valves which prevent the political and social system in England from exploding, as it tends to pull down the exclusive barrier between the old nobility and the new. It is perfectly possible that the grandson of a merchant may be admitted with open arms into an exclusive circle of high life from which the grandson of a duke may be shut out! And if such a state of things puzzles the ideas of our continental neighbours concerning us, and if it is not altogether pleasant to many among ourselves, all that we can answer is, that it works well practically, and tends on the whole, to raise the tone of English society, by teaching the inheritors of ancient lineage and noble blood that they must not trust too much to such advantages for their success in life.

A very great difference between England and most of the continental nations is the exclusive intermarriages of noble families in their own rank. On the continent a test of blood has been handed down to our own time which has long been forgotten in England, or which, when it is preserved, is regarded rather as a matter of mere curiosity than as one of the smallest importance. We allude to the sixteen quarters of pure gentility, when the families of the father and mother, the two grandmothers, the four greatgrandmothers, and the eight greatgreatgrandmothers are all noble, that is to say, all entitled to bear coats of arms. By the universal consent of continental Europe the possession of sixteen noble quarters has been absolutely necessary in order to procure admission into the greatest and most illustrious orders of knighthood and religious chapters, and into high places at courts. And hence marriage, especially in Germany, required a rigorous sifting of the remote ancestry on either side. For as one drop of negro blood serves to kick an unfortunate American thus tainted down the stairs of a New York boarding-house, so the misfortune of one among eight greatgreatgrandmothers having been a bourgeoisie, would close the door of admission in the preceptory of St. John's, or the Cathedral of Strasburg, or the Inner Presence Chamber of the Elector Palatine against a German count or baron who could only number fifteen quarters of gentle blood.

According to our English notions, this test of blood is rather one of curiosity than of real value; for if we compare the German nobility, which still very generally possesses it, with the British nobility, who never inquire whether they possess it or not, we shall find our own aristocracy pre-eminent in high-breeding, noble daring, brilliancy of ancestry, talent, and simple unostentatious grandeur of character. Very many, however, both of our peers and our untitled nobility would be found to possess sixteen quarters, if considerable trouble were taken to discover the various intermarriages of all their paternal and maternal ancestors during four generations. And when the pedigrees of some of the highest English houses show an occasional intermarriage with a family of ordinary station, we have no right hastily to conclude this to be a mesalliance that would tarnish their descent even according to the strictest continental rules. Where a Duke of Devonshire married a Hoskins, or a Duke of St. Albans a Nelthorpe, there was no intermixture of base blood. Both these ladies, and many others whom marriage has, in like manner, raised to the highest ranks, belonged to the British gentry, that is to the untitled nobility, and not to the roture.

In Scotland, possibly on account of its more intimate ancient connection with the continent, sixteen quarters have been much more considered as a test of blood than in England. In that country funeral hatchments, blazoned with the sixteen shields of paternal and maternal ancestry, were formerly common, and are not, even now, wholly disused; and among the old papers of many a private gentleman's family may be found a most carefully prepared list of the sixteen noble or gentle descents of some ancestor in the 17th century. One of the finest specimens that ever existed in this or any other country of sixteen illustrious paternal and maternal descents, was the hatchment of a venerable lady who may possibly be still remembered by some of the most aged persons now alive, Lady Clementina Fleming, Baroness Elphinstone, great-grandmother to the present peer of that name. Of her sixteen quarters there was not one under the rank of an Earl! And all were of the most ancient and illustrious of the Scottish nobility.

But it must be admitted that many even of our best families have the pure purple of their blood intermixed with a few drops from a bourgeois stream. And of this there is no reason to be ashamed. The proof of value is the result. The aristocracy of Great Britain may fairly claim superiority in all essential points over that of the continent; although the latter may perhaps be more uniformly and exclusively well descended on all sides, both paternal and maternal. And therefore we cannot admit that the test of sixteen quarters enters necessarily into the composition of a first-rate gentleman. That which is truly ennobling is a long line of gentle ancestors, either from father to son, or through heiresses bringing the right of representation of their families, combined with immediate honourable and appropriate alliances; and to scrutinize the maternal ancestry of our mother's maternal grandmother is simply ridiculous, if weight is to be attached to the result as a claim to consideration, or a test of fitness for the higher grades of service of the sovereign, or for admission to the privileges of a military order like that of St. John of Jerusalem, or a sacred fraternity like those of Strassburg or Bamberg.

An important particular in which the ideas of many of our continental neighbours differ most essentially on genealogical subjects from our own is their unwillingness to recognise the representation of a family in the female line. In Germany and France the Salic law is most strictly observed. And the most remote male cadet is regarded as the representative of a family rather than an immediate daughter of the house. So strict are they in this particular, that even when a family is extinct in the male line, its descendant through a female is not regarded as its rightful representative. The practice of England is a remarkable contrast to this; for there is no county in which more than half of the ancient families are not represented in the female line. And some of the most illustrious names in the peerage are handed down through female descent to the present holders of them. We well remember the indignation of a Duc de Rohan, of the House of Rohan, when a Duc de Rohan of the family of Chabot was spoken of as his namesake. In common with all Frenchmen and Germans, he could not comprehend how the honour of representing a great family could be transmitted in the female line.

In England it is remarkable that all the most ancient baronies descend through females. And although there is no general rule with regard to Scottish titles, the patents of each being peculiar, and the line of succession in one family being rarely a criterion to go by in judging of that in another; yet the number of peerages which have descended in the female line is very great. Of this number are some of the most ancient and illustrious. As examples, we may cite Hamilton, Buccleugh (as Earl), Queensbury and Roxburghe among the Dukes; Marr, Rothes, Dumfries, Dysart, Eglinton, Errol, Kintore, Leven, Loudon, Orkney, Seafield, and Sutherland, among the Earls; Gray, Sinclair, Forrester, Sempill, Herries, Nairne, Napier, Polwarth, and Ruthven, among the Barons. This list contains many of the most important and historic titles in Scotland; and all of them have, at one time or other, descended from the original head of the House in the female line to the peer or peeress who actually enjoys the honour; although in some of them the succession is at present established in the male line of the ancestress who carried the peerage away from the race to whom it was originally granted. In one case, viz., Sinclair, the peerage has altogether left the original line of descent.

On the subject of the right of representation of ancient Scottish families being vested in the heir female, or heir of line, on the failure of the direct heir male, we will quote the words of the highest living authority in Scotland on peerage law. We will not, indeed, give his name, as his communication was private; but his opinion may be taken as conclusive on such points as those which we are now considering. "There is no reason whatever," says this most eminent lawyer, "for regarding the heir male of ancient Scottish families as the heir of the family. The Salic notion is, indeed, altogether a mistake; our greatest institutional writers having, on the contrary, inculcated that, at common law, the nearest of blood to the deceased, either directly or by representation, whether a male or a female descendant, and his or her issue, were the heir or heirs of the deceased. It is altogether unnecessary to adduce notorious instances of exclusively female descendants of our first and most ancient Scottish families, being styled and accounted their heirs, and, indeed, their representatives also, quite to the exclusion of heirs male."

It seems only fitting that in a country like Great Britain, where the succession to the Crown is invariably vested in a female, on the failure of a direct male heir, to the exclusion of all collateral male branches, the same rule should obtain as to the right of representing the ancient families of the nobility. And this non-recognition of the Salic law makes a very essential difference between our rules regarding the transmission of blood and family distinctions and those which obtain in some of the principal countries of the Continent.

SECTION III.

In old times, the Lords of Manors formed an upper class of the gentry of this country; and although, when compared with their great number, but few of them had been summoned to Parliament, yet they were liable to be summoned. It was from among them that the barons were selected; and even now, on account of their obsolete privileges, they may, in some manner, claim a superiority over the other gentry, or untitled nobility.

The English manor derives its origin from a very early time; for it would appear that, since the enactment of certain statutes in the end of the 13th and beginning of the 14th century, the process of subinfeudation, or granting land to be held in vassalage by knights service ceased. The lord of a manor is invested with high privileges. A court baron is inseparably incident to a manor, where the lord presides either in his own person or by his steward; and the jurisdiction of this Court extends over certain actions connected both with personal and real property. A Manor, in the original meaning of the term, consisted of lands upon which the lord had a mansion, and to which lands and mansion there belonged a seigniorial over freeholders qualified in respect of quantity of estate, and sufficient, in point of number, to constitute a Court Baron, and these freeholders were called Vassors. When we consider the importance of the station and privileges of Lords of Manors, and when we know that many families of the untitled English gentry have held that distinguished position from father to son, counting from the Norman conquest down to the present time, we cannot conceive how any doubt should ever have arisen as to the true nobility of the class to which they belong.

In Scotland the possession of a barony gave the holder a higher rank than that of gentlemen equally well descended who were not Barons. The Barons held their lands directly of the Crown. It was the barons only who witnessed the King's charters, and who are noted in the great historical instruments of the kingdom, such as the Decree at Brigham, in 1289, by which the Scottish nobles agreed to the marriage of Margaret, of Norway, with Edward, Prince of England; or the acknowledgment of Robert, the Lord High Steward, as inheritor of the Scottish Crown in 1371. Until the reign of JAMES I. of Scotland, the Barons, whatever might be their varying degree of power, were all peers, and, together with the Earls, formed the great council of the kingdom. During, and after, the reign of JAMES I., many barons appear more exclusively as lords of Parliament, and stand, like the earls, apart from, and above, the other barons. But still it may be doubted whether all the barons did not continue to possess a right to attend Parliament, and to be ranked as peers of the lords of Parliament, until 1587, in the reign of JAMES VI., when a new rule was instituted, according to which they were required to send representatives of their order from each sheriffdom, instead of personally attending. Thus the barons who were not lords of Parliament came to be the "Lesser Barons;" but although they had no longer the character of peers of the higher nobility, they still continued superior in rank to those of the gentry who were not lords of baronies; and their rights of barony, derived from the Crown, always included higher feudal privileges than those possessed by the rest of the gentry. It may be considered that the lord of a barony in Scotland holds a far higher rank than the ordinary continental noble; and the landed gentry of Scotland, whether they were lords of baronies, or whether they held their possessions by an inferior feudal tenure, stood exactly on the same footing with the continental nobility. They were all noble; and nothing is more untrue than our ignorant mistake of confining the epithet "noble" to peers, and withholding it from the gentry. The station of a Laird or country gentleman holding the title of "Baron," in Scotland, derived directly from the Crown, is at the very least on an equality with that of baron, count, or marquis, in France, when their titles were lawfully granted by the King, and is infinitely superior to those assumed titles of which the recognition depended on the mere courtesy of society.

We would except from the depreciation of the continental nobility the French dukes and the German princes and counts of the Empire, which last held so high a place among the nobles of Europe as to be admitted pari passu in point of alliances with Royalty. As regards intermarriage with the Royal family, there has always been a greater liberty allowed in this country to the subject to contract such alliances than has been permitted in most continental states. A special law has indeed been, of late, enacted, preventing the Royal family of Great Britain from intermarrying with subjects; or, at least, rendering the issue of such marriages incapable of succeeding to the Crown. But this Act cannot be said to imply the degradation of the subject. It was merely a wise measure of political precaution; and it had no reference to any incapacity on the part of the British noble or gentleman from matching with a princess, as his ancestor had done many centuries ago. Until the passing of this Act, such intermarriages were perfectly lawful in England, although they were not so in Germany. The Duke of Gloucester, brother of King GEORGE III., contracted a lawful marriage when he espoused the Countess Dowager of Waldegrave, who was a natural daughter of Sir Edward Walpole. This marriage was, however, peculiar, and may be considered as a mesalliance in this country, as it would have been in Germany, in consequence of the taint of illegitimacy. Had she been Sir Edward Walpole's lawful daughter, it would have been no mesalliance. A greater social liberty pervades all our genealogical relations, carried even to the highest rank, than is the case in the continental countries. The marriage of the Duke of Sussex with Lady Augusta Murray, the daughter of a great and illustrious House, boasting of much royal blood, was as binding a marriage in the eye of God as that of his uncle with Countess Waldegrave; and socially, in consequence of the more exalted birth of the lady, it ought to be considered as much less a mesalliance than the other. The only difference was, that between the dates of the two marriages, an Act of the Legislature had been passed which rendered such alliances unlawful, and deprived their issue of any right of succession.

In Germany the rule was different. No prince, member of a reigning House, could contract a marriage, except "à la main gauche," with any lady who did not possess the equality of birth which belongs to Sovereign Houses.

Apart from the Royal Marriage Act, the British peers and gentry would now be just as capable of intermarriage with the family of the King as they previously were. The Sovereign, feudally considered, is only "primus inter pares." The line of demarcation which has thus been formed is quite a novelty. In the 12th, 13th, and 14th centuries, the intermarriages of the Sovereigns, and their sons and daughters, both in England and in Scotland, with the nobility, was a matter of the most common occurrence; and such alliances were not confined to the highest nobility merely. Lords of Parliament of the rank of Barons, Knights, and Scottish Lords of Baronies, were frequently admitted to this high honour. The monarch often married the daughter of his subject; and the daughter of the monarch, in like manner, espoused a simple noble. This would seem to place a Scottish lesser baron on the same footing, socially and genealogically, with a Count of the German Empire. For to what more royal alliance could one of that august body attain than that of a knight of Swinton, or of Edmonstone, with the daughter of the reigning King?

Those illustrious Scottish families, moreover, who held their lands by regality, or as Palatinates, seem to have stood much in the same position, as regarded Scotland, with that of the reigning princes and counts as regarded the Germanic Empire. They could not, however, be justly said to be on a footing with these German potentates, inasmuch as the German Emperor was at the head of the body of Christian monarchs, and his immediate princely vassal held a different place on the scale of Europe from a princely vassal of the King of Scotland. These Palatines, however, were possessed of sovereign rights which may be regarded as identical with those of the princely vassals of the kingdoms of the Continent. Their power was the same in nature and essence, although the theatre on which that power was exercised was much more circumscribed. The Earl of March, the Earl of Stratherne, or the Earl of Douglas, may be said to have stood on the same footing, as regarded the Scottish monarch, with the great feudal Princes in the ancient French kingdom, who, though vassals of the king, enjoyed sovereign power in their own territories.

About the middle of the 18th century, the heritable jurisdictions in Scotland were abolished. But until then, the Scottish lords of regality retained their jurisdiction, and may be regarded as holding to their Sovereign, the position which the German Princes and Counts of the Empire held to the German Emperor. The dignity and rank of a Scottish Lord of Regality and a German reigning Prince, however, though similar in essence, was very different according to the way in which their relative positions were modified; for the German counts and princes were the vassals of him who, as the successor of the Roman Emperor, was the head of the Western Empire, and the chief of all the sovereigns of Christendom; whereas the King of Scotland was only one of the members of the great community of sovereigns.

The condition, moreover, of the great vassals of the German Emperor became more and more independent, in consequence of the elective nature of the Imperial dignity; whereas in the hereditary kingdoms of Europe the power of the Crown gradually predominated, and deprived the great vassals of their authority. Thus we see that in France the great feudal nobles and princely vassals who originally stood in the same powerful position with the German princes, were gradually absorbed in the monarchy; whereas the latter became more and more independent, and were at length fully recognised as sovereign and reigning. Thus, both the grandeur and the weakness of the imperial power of Germany favoured the lofty pretensions of the great vassals of the Empire. He, to whom they were vassals, was at once so great that kings owned his superiority, and so weak that dukes, princes, and counts would scarcely acknowledge his authority. In the different hereditary monarchies, on the other hand, the King, during successive generations, became more and more influential, and was aided in this extension of his prerogative by the rising importance of the towns and of the middle class. We cannot here enter upon the subject at length; but it may suffice to say that, while the power of the Crown gradually repressed and curtailed that of the great vassals, those potent feudatories, such as the Earl of Chester and the Bishop of Durham, in England, or the Earls of March, Douglas, and Stratherne, in Scotland, however supreme they might be in their own domains, or however influential within their respective native countries, could hardly pretend to the position of sovereign princes which was enjoyed by the cotemporary great feudal potentates in Germany. The Earl of March, and afterwards the Earl of Douglas, attempted, indeed, to assert something of the kind towards their native sovereigns; but their ambition ended in swift destruction. In England the only Palatine in modern times was the Bishop of Durham, who retained his original rights and dignities until the other day, when they were extinguished. But until then he was as much a Prince Bishop as regarded the realm of England, as an Elector of Mayence, or of Treves, or of Cologne was a Prince Bishop as regarded the Empire of Germany.

In the 17th century we have instances of a simple Scottish baron being regarded as a proper match for a princely German House. Count Leslie, the younger son of the lesser baron of Balquhan, in Aberdeenshire, intermarried with the House of Lichtenstein, in Austria. And there can be no question that in those days there was as little doubt on the continent concerning the nobility of the British untitled gentry as was the case two hundred years before, when they were permitted freely to intermarry with the royal houses of their own country.

To modern ideas, this unqualified assertion of the true nobility of the British gentry may seem very strange; and custom arising, in the first place, from insular isolation and ignorance, has made great changes. Yet no social change can be so great as the utter oblivion into which the right of the gentry of this country to be considered as noble, has within recent generations so strangely fallen.

SECTION IV.

It may tend to show the status of the untitled gentry of Great Britain, if we give a number of instances of their intermarriages with Royalty, and of the descendants in the male line of such Royal marriages.

As regards the alliances of the Royal family of Scotland, we will not pursue our inquiries beyond the reign of King ROBERT I.; for he and his royal successors afford a sufficient number of instances to prove that the untitled gentry of Scotland were not, at least, in the 14th and 15th centuries regarded as belonging to the Roture.

King ROBERT BRUCE had, besides his daughter, Margery, wife of the Lord High Steward, through whom the Scottish Crown afterwards passed to the House of Stewart, two younger daughters, i. Margaret, married 1st, to an untitled gentleman of the name of Robert Glen, and 2ndly to the Earl of Sutherland; ii. Matilda, married to an untitled gentleman of the name of Thomas de Izac. Her dau. and heir wedded De Ergadia, Lord of Lorn. King DAVID II. had for his second Queen a lady of a private family, Margaret, daughter of John de Logie.

King ROBERT II., the first of the Stewarts, married 1st, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Adam Mure, of Rowallan, an ancient family of untitled gentry in Ayrshire, where it continued to flourish untitled until our own day. It is now represented, in the female line, by the Marquis of Hastings. King ROBERT II.'s daughter, the Princess Jean, married, twice over, untitled gentlemen—Sir John Lyon and Sir James Sandilands. It is true that her descendants have been raised to the peerage as Earls of Strathmore and Lords Torphichen. But they continued untitled during many generations; and according to the popular modern mistake were during all that time Bourgeois. King ROBERT II.'s daughter, Princess Margaret, who first married the Earl of Douglas, married 2ndly, an untitled gentleman, Sir John Edmonstone. Her descendants flourish to the present day in precisely the same station, and according to popular mistake are not noble. Another daughter of the same King married Robert Logan. Another dau. of the same king married Sir John Swinton. From her descends a long line of Swintons of Swinton, flourishing to the present day without title, and according to popular ignorance belonging to the Roture.

King ROBERT III. married Annabella Drummond, the daughter of an untitled family, which, according to modern notions, was first ennobled three generations after this royal alliance! The Princess Mary, daughter of this king, was the most prolific lady in Scotland, having been four times married, and having given birth to four different sets of sons. Her first husband was the Earl of Angus. Her second was Sir James Kennedy, her son by whom became a Lord. Her third was Sir William Graham, by whom she had a numerous family, who flourished as untitled Scottish Lairds of Fintry, Duntroon, and Balgowan. Two of her remote descendants have been raised to the peerage, viz., Viscount Dundee and Lord Lynedoch. Her fourth husband was Sir William Edmonstone, the younger son of Sir John Edmonstone; and her aunt the Princess Margaret. Her descendants are the Edmonstones of Duntreath, whose only title is a very modern baronetcy. Jane Beaufort, Queen of JAMES I., took to her second husband the Black Knight of Lorn.

Now, according to the ideas which obtain on this subject in the present day, these kings and princesses all intermarried with families which were not noble, and consequently were Bourgeois; and all the direct descendants in the male line of those Royal marriages have, ever since, continued Bourgeois, excepting one or two, who have been made Lords. Can anything more clearly point out the preposterous nature of this modern ignorance!

We shall also find that the proud House of Plantagenet did not disdain the alliance of Commoners. To begin with the family of King EDWARD I., the cotemporary of King ROBERT BRUCE.

EDWARD I., by his second marriage with the Princess Margaret, daughter of PHILIP III., King of France, had two sons, i. Thomas, of Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk, who, by Alice, dau. of Sir John Halys, had a daughter, Margaret Plantagenet, created Duchess of Norfolk, whose second husband was Sir Walter Manny; ii. Edmund, Earl of Kent, whose daughter and heir, Joan Plantagenet, the fair maid of Kent, before she married EDWARD, the Black Prince, was the wife of Sir Thomas Holland.

Richard Plantagenet, Duke of York, the rightful heir to the Crown of England, and father of King EDWARD IV., George, Duke of Clarence, and King RICHARD III., had a daughter, Anne Plantagenet, whose second husband was Sir Thomas St. Leger. George, Duke of Clarence, had a daughter, Margaret Plantagenet, Countess of Salisbury, who married Sir Richard Pole. King EDWARD IV. married Elizabeth Woodville, daughter of Sir Richard Woodville. Queen CATHERINE of France, the widow of King HENRY V., selected as her second husband a very obscure gentleman of Wales, of the name of Tudor, and by him she was the ancestress of a proud line of Kings. Several of the Queens of King HENRY VIII. belonged to the untitled gentry—Anne Boleyn, Jane Seymour, and Catherine Parr. Now, according to the ideas which have prevailed in this country during late generations on the subject of nobility and gentry, all these above-mentioned intermarriages between kings, and the immediate blood of kings, with their subjects, were contracted between Royal persons and the Bourgeoisie; for not one of those whom we have designated belonged to titled families.

It would certainly have much astonished a Swinton, or an Edmonstone, at the time that ROBERT II. and ROBERT III. singled them out as fit husbands for their daughters, if they had been informed that from a revolution in the ideas of their countrymen, the direct male line of the descendants and representatives of their Royal marriages were to be reckoned as merely on a par with the mercantile classes and higher tradespeople of the Continent. For that is, in fact, the position to which the British gentry reduce themselves by voluntarily ignoring their nobility.

We are much too well-inclined to concede to foreigners a superiority to which they are not really entitled, but which they are glad to take when it is offered to them. It is truly absurd to see a French Countess, or an Italian Marchioness ranked in fashionable lists on the same footing with the wives of English Marquises and Earls. A German Count of the Empire stands in a much higher position than most foreign nobles, and is well entitled to all the respect which we can show him. But the ignorant love of foreign title, which is so common in this country, does not distinguish between a Prince or Count of the Empire, and a Russian or Neapolitan Prince, or a French Count. We have known an English gentleman, who gave the precedence to a Princess ——— over Her Royal Highness the Countess of ——— merely because the one had a more high-sounding title than the other! Whatever degree of courtesy may be shown to a foreigner, it is forgetfulness of their proper place when the high English nobility yield precedence to those of them whose titles in this country hold a more exalted rank than their own. An English Baron or Viscount ought not to yield the pas to a French Count or an Italian Marquis. And even if a Scottish laird, who is lord of a lesser barony, is content to do so, we are not sure but that he is conceding much more than the stranger is entitled to claim.

Two of the most curious mistakes that were ever committed in relation to English and foreign rank and title may be cited as falling within our own more immediate observation.

John, 17th Earl of Shrewsbury, had two daughters. The elder of the two, Lady Mary Talbot, who afterwards married Prince Doria Panfil, of Rome, was, at one time, engaged to a Prince of Saxe Altenburg, a younger brother of the late Queen of Bavaria. As he was a Prince of a Sovereign house, a marriage with a member even of one of the highest families of subjects would have been a mesalliance, according to the strict views of Germany. In cases of this kind, however, there used to be a convenient remedy, while the sacred Roman or Germanic Empire endured. The Emperor of Germany was frequently induced to confer the dignity of Princess of the Empire upon a lady of inferior degree, whom a reigning Prince, or Prince of a reigning House wished to espouse; and this elevation placed her upon an equality with her intended husband.

The European nobility in general may be considered as standing on the same footing. One title is common in one country, while a different one obtains in another. And in some countries there is a vast body of ancient untitled nobility, such as Venice and England. There are, indeed, untitled nobles in all the countries of the Continent. But, as in most of them, titles are so abundant, we apprehend that there are very few nobles of any account who are not thus distinguished. If a continental noble of ordinary rank, a French Count, a German Baron, or an Italian Marquis, were to settle in England, his letters of nobility should be considered equivalent to a British grant of armorial bearings of equal antiquity. It has been well remarked that "A German Baron, whose ancestor flourished under Henry the Lion, may rank with an English gentleman, whose ancestor fought under Richard Cœur de Lion. But the new Baron of yesterday deserves no precedence over the parvenu who has just purchased a coat of arms at the Heralds' Office."* "If neither Britons visited the Continent, nor foreigners Great Britain, it would be indifferent what titles they bore. The common people in England pay as much respect to their superiors as the common people in any other country. The shopkeepers in London are as civil behind their counters as the shopkeepers in Paris or Vienna. In the inns in towns and along the road, his 'honour' or his 'worship' is waited on with as much respectful attention as his 'Gnaden' in Germany, or his 'Excellenza' in Italy. A landlord in England, with the title of Baronet, is of no less importance among his tenants than a landlord in Sicily with the title of Prince among his vassals; and a squire in his ancient hall in Lancashire might vie with any baron in his moated castle in Languedoc. But should they travel, the advantage would always be in favour of the continental noblesse. A foreigner in England usually passes for a person of greater dignity than he is; while an Englishman abroad often loses his importance. And this, because our gentry bear more modest titles, and seem to have forgotten that they are nobles."

We have not yet adverted to the claims of the Celtic races of princes and chiefs to rank with the ancient nobility. But certainly whatever distinction must be conceded to an old English squire or Scottish laird belongs, with at least equal justice, to the representative of ancient Highland, Welsh, or Milesian blood. In the Highlands of Scotland there are doubtless many Macdonalds and Campbells who cannot trace their descent to the patriarch of their race, and who may be descended from illegitimate offshoots, or from vassals who have adopted the family name of their lord. At the same time, the genuine noble blood of the great highland families is very widely spread, and many are to be found in a humble position who can boast of a certain and authentic descent from the cadets of some high and mighty chief. The same may be said of the old Welsh and Irish Houses.

Although we cannot here enter at length upon the subject of the nobility of the gentry of the Highland clans, we may take one or two by way of example. Somerled, King of the Isles, was killed in battle in 1164. From him are descended the various families of the great House of Macdonald, viz., Sleat, Clanranald, Glengarry, Keppoch, and their manifold branches. Certainly, those families which can authenticate their direct male descent from a sovereign Prince who reigned in the 12th century, may well claim to be noble; and yet, according to modern ideas, only one of those branches is considered noble, and that in consequence of the lowest step in the Irish peerage granted two generations back!

A distinct branch of the mighty sovereigns of the Isles was represented by the great family of De Ergadia, Lord of Lorn. Its direct descendant is MacDougal, of Dunolly, who is most certainly well entitled to be reckoned noble. The Macfarlans of Arrochar, and their cadets, are descended from a younger brother of the third Earl of Lennox; and this illustrious descent, from the ancient Celtic Earls of the district in which their possessions lay, can be clearly proved by charters. Surely this illustrious pedigree, dating from the 11th century, entitles them to be ranked among the nobles of the land. A similar claim may be advanced by Robertson of Strowan, whose original designation of De Atholia distinctly indicates a descent from the ancient Earls of Athol, and the history of the succession of their lands points to the same genealogical result. We do not assert that every Macdonald, MacDougall, Macfarlane, or Robertson is necessarily noble. But that all the chief families of these clans are most noble is an undoubted fact. And as their cadets were numerous and prolific, it is probable that the same nobility has been inherited by many families of these names, who are now in an obscure position.

We have given these four Clans as specimens of the great Highland races, because they continue untitled to the present day (with the exception of the Irish Barony of the chief branch of the Macdonalds), and because they are clearly proved to be the direct male descendants of Princes and Earls of the 11th and 12th centuries. Many other Highland clans are neither less ancient nor less noble.

The same arguments may be used in favour of the nobility of the ancient Welsh untitled houses, many of whom can boast of a descent from the former princes of their country.

In Ireland, that class to which modern ignorance restricts the right of nobility, viz., the peerage, is but a poor specimen of the real aristocracy of the land. In England, and still more in Scotland, the peerage may be regarded as, upon the whole, giving a favourable specimen of the nobility of the two countries. But this cannot be said of the Irish peers, very few of whom belong to the original illustrious races of the island. With the exception of some splendid houses of Anglo-Norman descent, and a few respectable families of the Elizabethan times, the great body of Irish peers must confess their inferiority to those of the same class in Great Britain. And it is quite astonishing how few among them are, like O'Neil and O'Brien, connected with the history of their native country during its days of independence. The real nobility of Ireland are often to be found in very subordinate stations in their own island, or in the service of foreign princes, where they have occasionally risen to honours as high, or even higher, than those which graced their fathers in the old country. No country in Europe has had such astonishing revolutions of property as Ireland. The high have been laid low, and the obscure have been exalted, not, as in England and Scotland, by gradual decay and equally gradual advancement, but by sweeping catastrophes which have overspread the land like a hurricane or a flood. Earl Strongbow, Essex, Strafford, Cromwell, William the Third, and (last and greatest of all the spoilers) the hammer of the Encumbered Estates Court, have prostrated successive generations and races of ancient Irish landowners, and introduced new men into the possessions of the banished lords of the old soil. This has produced an unhappy social antagonism as well as genealogical confusion, from which England and Scotland have been comparatively free. Since the Norman conquest of the former country, and the Saxon and Norman colonization of the time of Edgar and David the First in the latter, the change of property and the rise and fall of families have been gradual and partial without effecting any social revolution.

We trust that enough has been said in the foregoing pages to vindicate for the gentry of Great Britain the right to take the place of nobility in the real and original sense of the word. Our connection with continental countries is now so close, and English gentlemen are so frequently permanent residents abroad, that it is very important that they should be aware of their relative position as regards the natives of the countries where they reside; and that they should know the degree of distinction to which different foreigners are entitled. From ignorance they are led to estimate some titled foreigners too highly, while perhaps they occasionally underrate others. A German Baron, a French Count, and an Italian Marchese may be regarded as nearly equal in rank, when of equally good family. But none of them are in reality more noble than an English country squire of good old blood. And when an alliance is formed between an ancient titled family of the continent and an equally ancient untitled English family it is one of perfect equality. On the continent much more respect is paid to ancient blood than to mere title; and as an old untitled noble looks down upon an upstart Count or Baron, so ought an English untitled gentleman to do. In countries where the line of demarcation between the classes is strictly drawn, nobility is an essential, but it is no distinction. In Germany, for instance, everybody that one meets in good society is at least a Baron or a Baroness. But it is only a well-born Baron or Baroness that is regarded as a real gentleman or lady.

From our ignorance of the position of foreigners in their own country, we sometimes make fatal mistakes in our intercourse with them. A gentlemanly foreigner may ingratiate himself with an English lady, and induce her to marry him, on the supposition that although he has no title, nor yet the magical De before his name, he is nevertheless a man of her own social rank. Her mortification will be grievous when she finds that she has entered a family of the bourgeoisie; that she can be received at no Court, and that no noble salon will be open to her. Moreover, the fact that her birth in her own country is good will not avail her in that of her adoption. Nay, it will occasion to her the deeper mortification, for she will find herself the more completely out of her proper place. In like manner, an English gentleman who has the misfortune to ally himself with the daughter of a continental Roturier will find himself in an entirely false position, and the station of his children will be effected by their mother's inferiority. The only remedy in such cases is for the well-born wife or husband to induce the unequal partner whom they have selected to migrate to England, where the line of demarcation, not being so strictly defined, the exclusion may be overcome; a result which, in a strict continental country like Germany, would be hopeless. A British lady who marries a Roturier, or a low-born Englishwoman who marries a foreigner of distinguished family, will find themselves, when on the continent, liable to perpetual mortification.

Without, however, taking so serious a step as embarking in a matrimonial speculation with foreigners, English gentlemen and ladies are constantly visiting the continent; and they frequently establish themselves permanently there. It is, therefore, essential that they should be fully aware of their proper place on the social scale, and that they should not allow themselves to be placed on a footing of inferiority to the nobility of the country where they are residing. They ought to call themselves noble; and if they do not thus call themselves, they will lose their proper place. Every man born a gentleman, who happens not to be the heir to a hereditary title, which is the case with nine-tenths of the British aristocracy, possesses a certain status in society, which is his birthright, and on this he ought not to permit any infringement. And the same jealous care which, in this country, would lead him to maintain his right to associate on an equal footing with persons who, although possessing titles, still belong to the same social grade with himself, ought to lead him, in a continental country, to insist upon standing on an equal footing with the nobility of that country.

We have known the son of the younger son of a Duke, who, from ignorance of his proper rank, said that he was not a nobleman, and was thus placed below the salt in great German society, while, in fact, he was entitled to hold the highest place of any in the room. And on the other hand, we have known an English gentleman, who, probably, had not a drop of peer's blood in his veins, preserve his proper place in continental circles by asserting, and that with perfect truth, that he was a nobleman. He, in fact, was as noble as any German Baron; while the other was, if he had only known it, neither more nor less than a German Prince.

English peers, baronets, and landed gentry, entitled to coats of arms, form the great body of the nobility of this country, some of whom are of old, and some of new blood: as is the case with the nobility of every other country. But we must remember that all are noble; that the peers and their families do not exclusively form the nobility; and that a Baronet or a member of a family without title, but possessing a coat of arms, is just as much a nobleman as a Marquis or an Earl, although he cannot pretend to the same rank or illustration. The constant and close alliances which take place between our titled and untitled aristocracy shows that this virtual equality is understood amongst ourselves. But it is necessary that we should be prepared to maintain it in our intercourse with foreigners, and not allow the German Baron, the French Count, or the Italian Marchese to consider as their only equals in this country the privileged few who bear similar titles; while they regard the great body of well-descended old English gentry as belonging to a class with whom they can never be brought into social contact in their own land.

We have seen that in former centuries the untitled gentry of Great Britain were permitted to match with the daughters, sisters, and nieces of kings. The descendants of such royal marriages, and those who, in this country, stand upon a perfect social equality with them, must not allow themselves to be elbowed out of their proper position among the nobility of Europe through the insolent assumption of those who would contest their rank, while they themselves have almost forgotten to maintain it. To remind them that they possess it, has been the object of this Essay on the British Gentry.

1. WILLIAM-ROBERT, b. 16 Nov. 1835.

II. Thomas-Vincent, b. 15 Oct. 1836.

III. Edward-Charles, b. 13 Oct. 1839.

Mr. Acton is a magistrate for the co. of Worcester.

Lineage.—The Actons, whose antiquity of descent is equalled by few existing families, are of Saxon origin, and were in Worcestershire, according to Mr. Abington, previously to the Conquest. Soon after that great event, we find them seated at Ombersley; and in the 3rd Henry III. the name of Elias de Acton, of Acton Hall, in Ombersley, appears with those of other knights and gentlemen summoned to serve upon a jury.

From a common ancestor with the ACTONS of Acton sprung the ACTONS of Sutton, of which family that of Wolverton is a scion, being founded by a younger son of Sir Roger Acton, of Sutton (the heir of Sir John Mortimer), who m. Alice, sister of William Cokesey, Esq., and was father of JOHN ACTON, who acquired the estate of Wolfrinton, or Wolverton, in Worcestershire, as heir to his uncle, the last of the Cokesseys.

WILLIAM ACTON, Esq. of Wolverton (son and heir of William Acton, of Wolverton, by Margaret his wife, dau. and co-heir of Richard Perkins, Esq. of Beenharn, Berks, and grandson (by Barbara his wife, dau. and co-heir of John Vincent, Esq.) of William Acton, Esq. of Wolverton, who d. 12 April, 1679); m. Anne, dau. of William Tyler, descended from the Ardens of Warwickshire; and, dying 6 Sept. 1763, left a son and successor, WILLIAM ACTON, Esq. of Wolverton, who m. in 1801, Ann-Constantia Davies, descended from the family of Fowler, of St. Thomas, co. Stafford; and dying 22 Feb. 1814, left, with a dau. Mary, who d. unm., a son, the present WILLIAM ACTON, Esq. of Wolverton.

ADAIR OF BELLEGROVE.

ADAIR, GEORGE, Esq. of Bellegrove, and Rath, Queen's County, b. 13 Sept. 1784; m. 16 May, 1822, Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of the Very Rev. Thos. Trench, Dean of Kildare, 2nd brother of the late Lord Ashdown, and by her, who d. 21 March, 1823, has an only son, JOHN-GEORGE, J.P. cos. Tipperary and Donegal, b. 3 March, 1823.

Mr. Adair, who s. his father 14 July, 1809, is J.P. and D.L. for the Queen's County, and was high-sheriff in 1822.

Lineage.—The traditional origin of the ADAIRS of Bellegrove is this:

THOMAS, the 6th Earl of Desmond, having gone on a hunting expedition, lost his way, and was benighted between Tralee and Newcastle, co. Limerick, where he was received and hospitably entertained by William M'Cormac, whose dau. he subsequently married. At this alliance his family and also, it is said, were much offended, and compelled him to fly to France, and resign his title and estates to his younger brother, in 1418. He d. of grief at Rouen, A.D. 1420, the king of England attending his funeral. The family account proceeds to state that his grandson,

ROBERT, returning to Ireland, with the hope of regaining his family title and estates, killed Gerald, the White Knight (2nd son of Gerald, the then Earl of Desmond) in single combat, at Athdare (Ford of the Oaks), co. Limerick, but was subsequently defeated, and fled to Scotland, where he assumed the name of ADAIR.

THOMAS ADAIR, Esq. (son of Archibald Adair), m. Mary Hamilton, of the Scotch noble family, and settled in the Queen's County, his patrimonial estates being much diminished, in consequence of his father having been attainted by King JAMES. He had issue, Archibald, William, John, Robert, and a large family, all of whom d. without issue, except

ARCHIBALD ADAIR, Esq., who m. in 1731, Jane, dau. of Mark Antony Chateauf, and had issue, 1 John; 2 Mark Antony, d. young; 1 Mary, d. unm. The eldest son,

JOHN ADAIR, Esq. of Rath, Queen's County, m. 26 Feb. 1776, Rebecca, eldest child of George Maquay, of the city of Dublin, Esq., and his wife Elizabeth, dau. of Eccles Disney, Esq. of Churchtown, co. Waterford, and dying 14 July, 1809, left issue,

I. GEORGE, heir to his father.

II. JOHN, b. 3 Jan 1792; d. unm. 3 Jan. 1839.

ADEANE OF BABRAHAM.

ADEANE, HENRY-JOHN, Esq. of Babraham, co. Cambridge, J.P. and D.L., M.P. for that county, b. 9 June, 1833, m. 5 June, 1860, Lady Elizabeth-Philippa Yorke, eldest dau. of the Earl of Hardwicke.

Lineage.—The family of Adeane, now of Babraham, co. Cambridge, derives descent from the very ancient house of DEYNE or DENE of Wallingford temp. EDWARD I. A Brass in St. Mary's Church, Wallingford, dating between the years 1400 and 1469, noticed by Symonds in 1644, bore this inscription, "Hic jacet Johns Adeane et Alicia uxor ejus, qui quidem Johns obiit anno 1400: Alicia obiit xxi die Julii anno n. 1409."

The name in the older pedigrees is variously written De Dene, Atta Dene, or A'dene. The original coat of arms was "Gu. two bars and a canton conjoined, arg." for Dene, exists in the Forest of Dene, temp. HENRY III.; but that of the Wallingford Deane is described in Phillipp's Ordinary of 1622, as "Vert on a chev., between three griffins' heads, erased, or, five estoiles, sa." derived obviously from the arms of Edmunds of Dodington, Oxfordshire, a dau. of which family Margaret Edmunds, was the mother of John Deane of Mattingley, to whom the bearings were confirmed (mutatis coloribus) by Camden.

The Deanes of Nethercott—a branch of Deane of Wallingford—became extinct in the male line, and the estate devolved on Sir Richard Harrison, whose wife Dorothy, was dau. of William Deane, Esq. of Nethercott, by Isabel, his wife, dau. of Sir William Whorwood of Sandhill, co. Stafford.

The connection between the two families of Deane and Whorwood commenced with the marriage of William Deane, Esq. of Nethercott, with Isabel, dau. of Sir William Whorwood. The next match was that of Isabel's niece, Mary Whorwood, with SIMON ADEANE, Esq. This Mary Whorwood was sister of Robert Whorwood, to whom she erected (jointly with her son) a monument in St. Ebbs' Church, Oxfordshire, in 1685. The son and heir of Simon and Mary ADEANE was SIMON ADEANE, Esq., who d. in 1714, and was s. by his son,

SIMON WHORWOOD ADEANE, Esq., who m. Mary, dau. of the Hon. and Rev. Dr. Henry Brydges (brother of the Duke of Chandos), and dying in 1749, was s. by his son,

Mr. Archer s. his father 16 May, 1834, and is a magistrate and deputy-lieut. for Cornwall.

Lineage.—The Archers came over at the time of the Conquest, and the name is to be found in the Battle Abbey roll. A branch of this family was ennobled, anno 1747, in the person of THOMAS ARCHER, Esq., M.P. for Warwick, who was created BARON ARCHER, of Umbrellade, in Warwickshire. The line more immediately before us appears to have been settled in Cornwall for at least 400 years, a John Archer having represented Helston in parliament as far back as the time of HENRY VI.

RICHARD ARCHER, of St. Kew, who possessed considerable property in St. Kew, St. Ewe, Bodmin, and other parishes, devised Trelewack, in St. Ewe, and all his estates to his nephew, Nicholas Archer, eldest son of his brother John, rector of Carhayes, and to this Nicholas, his father, by will, bequeaths "his silver cup, to remain for ever in the keeping of the eldest son of my family." The rector of Carhayes, the Rev. JOHN ARCHER, had three sons, Nicholas, who d. s. p.; Edward, vicar of Manaccan, who m. Judith Swete; and John; and three daus., Amy, m. to George Shide; Anne, and Mary.

ARMSTRONG OF MEALIFFE AND CHAFFPOOL.

ARMSTRONG, GEORGE-DE LA POER, Esq. of Mealiffe, co. Tipperary, and Chaffpool, co. Sligo; s. his father 2 Dec. 1846.

Lineage.—The Armstrongs of the Border were at the head of a numerous and warlike clan, the most famous of whose chieftains was John Armstrong, of Gilnockie in the parish of Canonby, Eekdale. A branch was settled in Lincolshire, and from that sprang

SIR THOMAS ARMSTRONG, Knt., b. at Nimeguen, in Holland, who was a great sufferer in the royal cause, and was very active for CHARLES II. before the Restoration. His enterprising spirit excited the jealousy of Cromwell, who threw him into prison and even threatened his life. He engaged subsequently with all the zeal that was natural to him in the service of the Duke of Monmouth; finding himself obnoxious to the court, he fled the kingdom and went to Holland, and his flight was soon followed by outlawry. He was seized abroad and sent to London, where he was condemned by Chief Justice Jeffries, and executed at Tyburn, without a trial and with peculiar circumstances of rigour. The attainer was eventually reversed. Sir Thomas left no male issue. His brother,

CAPT WILLIAM ARMSTRONG, founder of the Armstrong family in Tipperary, went over to Ireland shortly after the battle of Worcester, and settled in the old castle at Farney bridge, near Thurles, where he was followed by his brother's widow, Lady Armstrong. William Armstrong was captain of the troop of horse attached to the Tipperary militia, in 1688. He m. Alice, dau. of Sir Thomas Deane of co. Suffolk, and by her had issue, two sons, viz.,

JOHN, of Farney Castle, ancestor of the ARMSTRONGS of Mount Heaton, King's County, and of Farney Castle, co. Tipperary.

THOMAS.

The second son,

THOMAS ARMSTRONG, Esq. of Mealiffe, high sheriff co. Tipperary, temp. Queen ANNE, m. a dau. of Robert Carew, Esq. of Ballinamona, and was ancestor of the ARMSTRONGS of Mealiffe and Chaffpool. The grandfather of the present possessor of Mealiffe,

THE REV. WILLIAM ARMSTRONG, of Mealiffe, m. in 1791, the Hon. Catharine-Eleanor Beresford, eldest dau. of

* ALDERMAN JOHN TEW, who died in 1771, had by his wife Margaret Maxwell, of Fellows Hall, co. Armagh (of the 2nd branch of the Farnham family) three daus., viz., 1. Elizabeth, who m. Gerald Fortescue, Esq., Ulster King-of-Arms, elder brother of Rear-Admiral Sir Chichester Fortescue, B.S. and had issue, Thomas, Commissioner at Delhi; and a dau. Anne, m. 1st, to William Hopkins Northey, Esq. of Oting, Bucks, and 2ndly, to the Rev. Sir Blackhall Vincent; 2. Margaret Tew, widow of the Rev. Wm. James Armstrong; and 3. Helen, m. 1st, to the Rev. Sir James M. Stronge, Bart., and 2ndly, William Holmes, M.P., Treasurer of H.M. Ordnance.

William, Lord Decies, Archbishop of Tuam, and by her, who d. in 1837, left at his decease, May, 1839, a son and successor, JOHN ARMSTRONG, Esq. of Mealiffe, who m. Catherine, dau. and heir of T. ARTHUR OF GLANOMERA.

ARTHUR, THOMAS, Esq. of Glanomera, co. Clare, b. 10 Sept. 1806; s. his father in 1845.

Lineage.—It is not clearly ascertained at what period the Arthurs settled in Ireland, but it is certain that they long held large possessions in that kingdom, especially in the co. of Limerick, until their estates in that county were confiscated by CROMWELL, for their loyalty to the royal cause, when they removed to the co. of Clare, and became seated at Glanomera.

The history of Limerick records that two members of the family sat in parliament for that city, temp. Queen ELIZABETH, viz., Edward Arthur, in 1559, and Thomas Arthur, in 1585.

THOMAS ARTHUR, Esq. of Glanomera, representative of this ancient house, m. Mary Butler, heiress of the BUTLERS of Kilmoyler, co. of Tipperary, lineally descended from the noble house of Ormonde, and was father of

THOMAS ARTHUR, Esq. of Glanomera, who m. Lucy, 4th dau. of Sir Edward O'Brien, Bart. of Drunolund, and left by her at his decease, in 1801 (with a dau., Mary, m. to Richard Henn, Esq. of Paradise, co. of Clare, who d. without surviving issue), an only son and successor,

THOMAS ARTHUR, Esq. of Glanamera, & April, 1778; m. 10 April, 1803, Harriet, 2nd dau. and co-heir (with her only sister, Charlotte, wife of Sir Edward O'Brien, Bart. of Dromoland) of William Smith, Esq. of Cahirmoyle, co. of Limerick, by whom he had issue,

ASHWORTH OF ASHWORTH, ELLAND, AND HALL CARR.

ASHWORTH, THE REV. JOHN-HARVEY, of East Woodhay, Hants, and Craggan Tower, co. Clare, late of Elland, co. York, a magistrate for Hampshire; m. Mary, eldest dau. of Thomas-Hippion Vavasour, Esq. of Rochdale, co. of Lancaster, descended from the very ancient house of VAVASOUR of Haslewood, co. York.

Lineage.—The Ashworths are one of the oldest families in England: the earliest notice of them which we have discovered is in 1244. In the middle of the reign of HENRY III., Bernard de Heseworth devised the manor of Ashworth to his sons, Robert and Stephen de Ashworth. Stephen's moiety was alienated by his daughter Margery (2d EDWARD I.) to her cousin Robert, son of Robert de

* William Ashburst's brother, HENRY ASHBURST, of London, Esq., an eminent merchant, distinguished for benevolence, humanity, and piety, was father, inter alios, of two sons, SIR HENRY ASHBURST, Bart. of Waterstock, and Sir William Ashburst, Knt., lord-mayor and M.P. for London.

Asheworth; and Matilda, dau. and co-heir of Robert, having married before 1349, Hugh, son of John de l'Hote conveyed the whole to him. The senior line thus became extinct in 1349, with the heiress marrying Holte, but younger branches have preserved a male succession even to the present time. One offshoot has long been seated at Hall Carr, co. Lancaster, and another at Elland Bank, co. York, from which springs, by direct descent, the present REV. JOHN-HARVEY ASHWORTH, M.A. of East Woodhay, Hants. His grandfather, John Ashworth, Esq. of Elland Bank, died seized of certain lands in Whitworth, which formed part of the ancient possessions of the family. During the civil wars, the Ashworths were engaged with Fairfax in support of the parliament.

Arms—Gu., a cross humetté and engrailed, or, between four fleurs-de-lis, arg.

ASKEW OF REDHEUGH.

ASKEW, HENRY-WILLIAM, Esq. of Redheugh, co. Durham, of Conishead Priory, co. Lancaster, and of Glenridding, co. Cumberland, b. 1808; m. in 1832, Lucy, 3rd dau. of the Hon. and Right Rev. Hugh Percy, D.D., Bishop of Carlisle (grandson of the Duke of Northumberland), by his wife, Mary, dau. of the Most Rev. Charles Manners Sutton, Archbishop of Canterbury, and has issue,

- i. HENRY-HUGH, b. 28 July, 1847.
- ii. Edmund-Adam, b. 25 May, 1849.
- iii. Charlotte-Elizabeth.
- iv. Emily-Mary.
- v. Frances-Louisa.

Mr. Askew is a J.P. for the cos. of Argyll, Lancaster, and Cumberland. He s. his father in 1852.

Lineage.—The family of Askew (Akeakeugh, which word signifies hilly ground, covered with oaks) was of long continuance in the co. of Cumberland, deriving their descent from Thurstan de Bosco (a name of the same import, Boscus, signifying a wood), who lived in the reign of King JOHN, and had feoffment, from the Boyvills, lords of Kirkstanton, of a place there called Aikakeugh, within the lordship of Millom, whence his posterity, according to the custom of those early ages, assumed their surname. For several generations, the family resided at Graymaine, in the parish of Muncaster, in the same county. Of this family was SIR HUGH ASKEW, to whom King HENRY VIII., in the 33rd year of his reign, gave Seaton, in the said lordship of Millom, which had been a house of Benedictine nuns.

Of this Sir Hugh, there is a curious anecdote in a MS. account of Cumberland, a copy of which is in the 6th vol. of Mr. Machel's collection, written by Mr. Edmund Sandford, a gentleman of the house of Askham. Speaking of Muncaster, and the country therabouts, he says;—"Four miles southward stands Seaton, an estate of £500 a-year, some time a religious house, got by one Sir Hugh Askew, yeoman of the cellar to Queen KATHERINE, in HENRY VIII.'s time, and born in this country. When that queen was divorced, Askew, being destitute, applied himself for help to the lord chamberlain, for some place or other in the king's service. The lord chamberlain knew him well, because he had often helped him to a cup of the best; but told him he had no place for him but that of a charcoal carrier. 'Well!' quoth Askew, 'help me in with one foot, let me get in the other as I can.' And upon a great holiday, the king looking out at some sport, Askew got a courtier, a friend of his, to stand beside the king, and he got on his velvet casock and his gold chain, and a basket of charcoal on his back, and marched in the king's sight with it. 'Oh!' says the king, 'now I like yonder fellow well, that dares not to do his dirty office in his dirty clothes. What is he?' Says his friend, who stood by on purpose, 'It is Mr. Askew, that was yeoman of the cellar to the late queen's majesty, and is now glad of this poor place to keep him in your majesty's service, which he will not forsake for all the world.' The king says, 'I had the best wine when he was in the cellar. He is a gallant wine taster, let him have his place again.' He afterwards knighted him, and gave unto him Seaton; and he seems to have continued in his office of yeoman of the cellar to Queen ANNE BOLEYN, and afterwards to King EDWARD VI."

Askew was of the camp, however, as well as the cellar, and a most gallant soldier too. He was raised to great honour and preform by his service to the king in his house ordinary, and in the field at the siege of Boulogne and wars of France.

In 1 EDWARD VI., he served in the expedition against Scotland, under Edward, Duke of Somerset, and for his bravery and conduct at the battle of Musselborough was created knight banneret under the royal standard, in the camp of Roxburgh. In 1 EDWARD VI., and again in the 3rd ELIZABETH, he was sheriff of Cumberland, and in two years after died, as appears from the following inscription on a brass plate upon his tombstone:—"Here lieth Sir Hugh Asketh, Knight, late of the Seller to King EDWARD the 6th, which Sir Hugh was maid Knight at Muskelbrough Felde, in the yere of oure Lord 1547, and dyd the second day of Marche, in the yere of oure Lord God 1562."

Sir Hugh m. the dau. of Sir John Huddleston, of Millom Castle, and settled Seaton upon her. Her ladyship wedded for her second husband, Mr. Pennington, lord of the manor of Muncaster, and had a son, Joseph, and a younger son, William, to whom she gave Seaton. Sir Hugh was s. by

HUGH ASKEW, Esq. of Graymaine, by some authorities called his son, by others his nephew. This gentleman was father of

ASSHETON OF DOWNHAM HALL AND CUERDALE.

ASSHETON, RALPH, Esq. of Downham Hall and Cuerdale, co. Lancaster, b. 20 Dec. 1830; m. 3 Aug. 1854. Emily-Augusta, 4th dau. of Joseph Feilden, Esq. of Wotton Park, co. Lancaster, and by her has issue,

A ROS AND HEIR, b. 1860.

Frances Annabella.

Lineage.—Ashton-under-Lyne, a market town in Salterford hundred, co. Lancaster, gave name to the ancient family of Ashton, which was founded by Orm Fitz Eward, to whom Albert de Gresley, baron of Manchester, gave in marriage with his dau. Emma, one carucate of land in Ashton, besides a knight's fee in Dalton, Parbold, and Wrightington.

ORM DE ASSHETON was father of

SIR THOMAS AND ROGER DE ASSHETON, the elder of whom was father of

SIR JOHN DE ASSHETON, living in 1335. This Sir John was summoned to parliament in 1339, and had with a 2nd son, Gilbert, a son and heir,

SIR ROBERT DE ASSHETON, vice-chamberlain to King Edward III., and commissioner to treat for peace with France. He was afterwards governor of Guynes, warden of the Cinque Ports, and admiral of the Narrow Seas. He was also Justiciary of Ireland, lord treasurer of England, and constable of Dover Castle. Besides a natural son, William, doctor of laws to John, king of Castile and Leon, he left, by his 1st wife Elizabeth, a son and heir,

THOMAS DE ASSHETON, who fought at the battle of Neville's Cross, and there captured the royal standard of Scotland. He also attended John of Gaunt as one of his retinue in Spain. He m. Eleanor, dau. of Sir John Buckley, and left a son,

SIR JOHN DE ASSHETON, knight of the shire of Lancaster, 1385, m. Margaret, dau. of Perkynd de Legh, of Lyne, and left, with a dau. Joanna, m. to Sir Robert Davenport, of brasshall, a son and heir,

SIR JOHN DE ASSHETON, drowned at Norham. Sir John m. dau. of Sir Robert Standish, of Standish, and besides a 2nd son, Nicholas, knight of the order of St. John of Jerusalem, left a son and heir,

SIR JOHN DE ASSHETON, knight of the Bath, seneschal of Exeter, governor of Hadupais, and bailiff of Constance, in France, and knight of the shire of Lancaster; by his 1st wife, Jane, dau. of Sir John Savile, of Tankersleigh, he left a considerable family. Of these was Sir Thomas Assheton, the alchemist (from whom descended the Asshetons of Ashton-under-Lyne, the Asshetons of Chadderton, and the Asshetons of Shepley, all now extinct in the male line). By his 2nd wife, Margaret, dau. of Sir John Byron, of Clayton, Sir John left one son,

SIR RALPH ASSHETON, first called of Middleton, page of honour to King HENRY VI., knight-marshal of England, first of the tower of London, and sheriff of Yorkshire, 14 and 15 EDWARD IV. In 1482, he was made knight-banneret on the field of battle at Hattonfield, in Scotland. He was afterwards vice-constable of England, and rode in procession at the coronation of King RICHARD III. In right of his wife Margaret, dau. and heiress of John Barton, of Middleton, he became owner of the estate of Middleton, and by her, together with an elder son, Sir Richard Assheton, of Middleton, (from whom the Asshetons, Barts., of Middleton, now extinct—see BURKE'S Extinct Baronetage), he left a large family, of whom the 2nd son,

WILLIAM ASSHETON, m. Margaret, dau. and sole heir of Adam Leaver, of Great Leaver, by whom he had with other issue, a son and heir,

RALPH ASSHETON, of Leaver, m. Eleanor, dau. of Adam Ribson, of The Park, by whom he had issue, RALPH, his successor, and a 2nd son, Richard, who was protégé of Lord

Burleigh, amassed great wealth, and purchased Whalley Abbey, and also the estates of Downham and Malham; but dying without issue, bequeathed Whalley and Malham to the son of his eldest brother: this eldest brother,

RALPH ASSHETON, of Leaver, m. Margaret, dau. of William Orrell, of Turton Tower, co. Lancaster, and left with other issue, an eldest son, who inheriting Leaver from his father, and Whalley and Malham from his uncle, became

RALPH ASSHETON, of Leaver, Whalley, and Malham (the eldest son) m. 1st, Anne, dau. of John Talbot, of Gatehouse, who d. s. p.; and 2ndly, Joanna, dau. of Edward Radclyffe, of Todmorden, and co-heiress through her mother of her kinsman, William Radclyffe, of Wymersley, by which lady he had a numerous issue, of whom the eldest, Sir Ralph Assheton, 1st Bart. of Leaver, Whalley, and Malham, m. Dorothy Bellingham, and left issue (now extinct in the male line, see BURKE'S Extinct Baronetage). The 2nd son of Ralph and Joanna Assheton was

RADCYFFE ASSHETON, first called of Cuerdale, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of John Hyde, and left, with other issue, an eldest son, Lineage.—This family is of considerable antiquity on the English border, as may be seen from various old records. In one of the earliest heraldic visitations of Northumberland, a document is recorded, in which William Adekyson, of Fenwick, is mentioned, 13 Nov. 1397; and in a manuscript possessed by the late Robert Surtees, Esq. of Mainsforth, F.A.S., is given a list of all the castles and towers in the county of Northumberland, with the names of their proprietors, made about the year 1460; and under the head, "Nomina Fortilicium infra com. Northumb." we find "Turris de Bukton," the property of William Atkynson.

There are records of this family in various places; but a fire having occurred at Brankston, which destroyed a number of the family registers, it would be difficult to make a connected history with precision.

Lineage.—This family is of the same lineage as the noble house of Bagot settled in Staffordshire since the Norman Conquest.

The Irish branch (of which THOMAS-NEVILLE BAGOT, Esq. is now the head), was established by one of the companions-in-arms of Strongbow. Their ancestor, a direct descendant of the original Strongbowian, SIR ROBERT BAGOT, lord of Baginbally, Dublin, was lord chief justiciary of Ireland 1285, and d. about 1358. From him derived,

PATRICK BAGOT, Esq. of Bagot's Town Castle, whose estates (forfeited by his great-grandson, Maurice, A.D. 1654) were restored to his grandson, John, by a decree of King CHARLES II, 29 July, 1663, but lost in 1688, owing to their adhesion to the House of Stuart. Maurice was specially exempted from pardon by Ireton at Limerick, two Colonels Bagot killed at Aughrim, John at Limerick, and Mark beheaded in Dublin. Nine Bagots were attainted, and their estates in Carlow and Limerick confiscated. A portion of the family escorted King JAMES to France. The above named

PATRICK BAGOT, Baginbally Castle, Esq., Limerick, b. circa 1495, m. 1540, Maria, dau. of O'Dwyer, Esq., Kilnamanagh, Limerick, and left (besides Maurice) a son and heir, BAIKIE OF TANKERNESS.

BAIKIE, JAMES, Esq. of Tankerness, co. Orkney, V.L., b. 4 April, 1786; m. 12 Dec. 1814, Eleanor-Anderson, dau. of W. Wemyss, Esq. of Cuttleshill, co. Fife.

Lineage.—This ancient family came originally from Norway, being almost the only one of pure Norwegian descent now holding property in the co. of Orkney. The name signifies a brook, or small stream (German, Baechehen).

The first recorded ancestor was PAUL BAIKIE, who, according to FORSÆUS, A.D. 1250, was captain of one of the three ships furnished to UPACUS, by Count Scullus, brother-in-law of King HACO, of Norway, in addition to nine fitted out by the latter to enable him to recover his kingdom of the Western Isles.

The following is the passage in FORSÆUS (translated by the Rev. Mr. Pope): "Among the Birkheims, a faction in Norway, there lived for a long time a person who called himself UPACUS; at last he was known to be a brother of the Kings of the Western Isles, and a son of King DUGALD's. In the year 1250, King HACO made him King of the Western Isles at Oslo, and called him HACO, at the same time, and promised to put him in possession of his kingdom the following summer; next spring, King HACO, going to Bergen, furnished him nine ships, and Count Scullus, the king's brother-in-law, added three more. These ships were commanded by Sigurdus Sape, or Sape, Sigurdus Smidus, or Smith, Paul BAIKINS or BAIKIE." The translator adds in a note, "The name of BAIKIE, in Orkney, is of great antiquity by this account."

The historian then proceeds to narrate the adventures of the expedition, and states that Paul BAIKIE was said to have been killed at a later period in the Western Isles. Another account states that he returned to Orkney, settled there, and acted as pilot, or commander of one of King HACO's ships, on his progress to, and return from his unfortunate expedition to Scotland, where he was defeated at the battle of Largs, and afterwards d. at Kirkwall, in 1263.

The next of the race descended from the above Paul, whose name figures in a public document, is MAURE, or MAGNUS BAIKIE, who purchased a property called Isbister, BAILLIE OF DOCHFORD.

BAILLIE, EVAN, Esq. of Dochfour, co. Inverness, m. in 1823, Lady Georgiana-Frederica Montagu, 4th dau. of William, Duke of Manchester, and has issue.

Lineage. SIR WILLIAM BAILLIE, of Lamington, by Marian his wife, dau. of Sir John Seton, of Seton, had a numerous issue. The three eldest sons had married a clergyman, who had been taken into the house as tutor, for a grievous offence which he had committed in their family, of which injury he died. The power of the church at this time being great in Scotland, the three brothers were obliged to fly.

The eldest settled in Inverness-shire; the second in Ireland: from him springs the family of Inshaughy. The third went to the Isle of Anglesey, and founded the family of which the Marquess of Anglesey is a descendant.

ALEXANDER BAILLIE, the eldest son, fought at the battle of Brechin, and was for his services rewarded with the baronies of Dunain and Torbreck, part of the castle lands of Inverness, in the year 1452. From him derived, fourth in descent,

WILLIAM BAILLIE, of Dunane, who m. Catherine, dau. of Robert More Munro, of Fowla, chief of the clan Munro, and left two sons, ALEXANDER, of Dunain, and John, ancestor of the family of Leys. The elder,

Mary-Anne, m. to John O'Sullivan, Esq. of Bere, in the co. of Cork (who is deceased), and has issue, Meorty, John, Herbert, Barbara, and Mary.

Dr. Baldwin m. 2ndly, in 1818, Julia, dau. of Edward Herrick, Esq. of Bellemount, and had a son, HERBERT JAMES-HENRY, b. 19 April, 1822; m. in Nov. 1845, Miss O'Driscoll, and is deceased.

Dr. Baldwin d. Jan. 1861.

Lineage.—The first of this family who came to Ireland, or, at least, to the south of that kingdom, were two brothers, who settled there in the reign of Queen ELIZABETH; the elder of whom was ranger of one of the royal parks, and m. to the dau. of Herbert of Powis, a house ennobled under that title, and illustrious under those of Pembroke, Montgomery, and Cherbury (see BURKE's Extinct Peerage). From this alliance the christian name of Herbert has been transmitted in the family, which has also continued to quarter the arms of Herbert with those of Baldwin. These two brothers purchased property, and fixed their residence in the vicinity of Bandon, in the co. of Cork; the elder at Mossgrove, the younger at Lisnagart. The former left three sons, of whom the 2nd,

HERBERT BALDWIN, Esq. of Currovidy, m. and had three sons,

- i. HENRY, of Currovidy, otherwise Mount Pleasant, co. Cork, m. Joan, widow of John Travars, Esq., and dau. of William Field, Esq., alderman of Cork, and had, with three daus. (Elizabeth, wife of Philip-Hawes Cross, Esq.; Anne, wife of Thomas Poole, Esq. of Mayfield; and Joanna, wife of John Ware, Esq.), two sons,

1 HENRY, m. Alice, dau. of Robert Warren, Esq., and was father of WALTER BALDWIN, Esq. of Mount Pleasant, high sheriff of the co. Cork in 1763; he m. Margaret, dau. of Samuel Hutchinson, Esq., and was s. by his son, HENRY, of Mount Pleasant, father (by Mary his wife, dau. of Herbert Gillman, Esq.) of HENRY BALDWIN, Esq. of Mount Pleasant, who m. Eliza, dau. of Chambre Corker, Esq., and left a son and successor, the present CHAMBER BALDWIN, Esq. of Mount Pleasant.

2 William, of Bettysgift, m. 1734, Elizabeth, dau. of Philip French, Esq., and was ancestor of the BALDWINs of Bettysgift.

ii. HERBERT, of whose line we treat.

iii. Walter.

i. Ruth, wife of Nathaniel Baldwin.

Of the sons, Henry and Walter are the progenitors of several considerable families in the co. of Cork. The 2nd,

HERBERT BALDWIN, Esq., who inherited the estate of Clohina, under the bequest of his uncle, Col. James Baldwin, m. in 1689, Mary, dau. of Col. Hungerford, of The Island, and had issue, 1 JAMES, his heir; 2 Herbert, who d. s. p.; and 3 Richard, whose son Richard, m. Miss German, of Affadown. Herbert Baldwin was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

JAMES BALDWIN, Esq. who m. in 1726, Elizabeth Langton, of Bury, in the co. of Limerick, and left at his decease, in 1776, 1 JAMES, his heir; 2 Herbert, M.D., who m. Miss Collis, and had, inter alios, a son, Michael, M.D., who m. Miss Shea; Anne, m. to Mr. Thomas Olliffe, of Cork; and Mary, m. to Charles McCarthy, Esq. The elder son,

JAMES BALDWIN, Esq., m. in 1763, Mary, dau. of Daniel O'Connell, Esq. of Derrynane, in the co. of Kerry, and left at his decease, three sons and five daus., 1 Walter, d. uam.; 2 Connell-James, late capt. 50th regiment, now of Toronto, Upper Canada; 3 HERBERT; and five daus. 1 Eliza, m. to Daniel McCarthy, Esq. of Glenarough; 2 Alice, m. to Matthew-Hale-Adderly Minihar, Esq.; 3 Mary-Anne, m. to

Richard Newton, Esq.; 4 Anne, m. to Major Broderick; and 5 Bridget, m. to William Hickey, Esq. of Lisbon. Mr. Baldwin's 3rd son is the present Dr. HERBERT BALDWIN, of Cork.

BALFOUR OF BALFOUR.

BALFOUR, DAVID, Esq. of Balfour and Trenabie, co. Orkney, D.L., convener of that county, b. 14 Oct. 43

1811; m. 12 Dec. 1844, Eleanor-Alder, dau. of Capt. Samuel-Barker Edmeston.

Lineage.—The very ancient family of Balfour, long heritable sheriffs of Fife, derive their name from Balfour Castle, in that county, built upon their earliest possessions in Scotland, the vale, or strath, of the Or, a tributary of the Leven. Their first recorded ancestor was SIWARD, living in the reign of DUNCAN I. His son, OSWALF, living temp. MALCOLM CAN-MOHR, was father of SIWARD, "cui dat EDGAR Rex vallem de Or (Strathor) et Maey, pro capite Otter Dant." He had a son, OCTRED, who founded an altarage to St. Michael for the souls of his father and grandfather, and of his son, MICHAEL DE BALFUR, "qui obit obies in Angliā," leaving two sons, between whom Octred de Strathor, their grandfather, divided his lands, viz.,

WILLIAM (Sir), of that ilk, sheriff of Fife, ancestor of the BALFOURS of Balfour, extinct in the male line, but represented through the female by the BETHUNES of Balfour; and

SIR MICHAEL DE BALFUR, Knt., 1st Baron of Strathor, who had a charter of the barony from WILLIAM the Lion, 1187. He was father of

SIR DAVID DE BALFUR, Knt. of Strathor, "qui obit cruce signatus apud Tunigiam," in 1269. His son and successor,

SIR MICHAEL DE BALFUR, Knt. of Strathor, seneschal of the Earl of Fife, fell in Wallace's defeat at Falkirk, in 1298, leaving a son,

SIR DAVID DE BALFUR, Knt. of Strathor, seneschal of Fife, who sat as a baron in the parliaments of Cambuskenneth, 1314, and of Ayr, 1315. He m. Isabella, dau. of Macduff of Reres, 2nd son of Malcolm, 8th Earl of Fife, and was s. at his decease, in 1318, being then with Bruce's army in Ireland, by his son,

SIR MALCOLM DE BALFUR, Knt. of Strathor, seneschal of Fife, who was slain by the English, leaving a son,

SIR MICHAEL DE BALFUR, who was brought up by his kinsman, Duncan, 12th Earl of Fife, who gave, in 1358, "consanguineo suo Michaeli de Balfour," in exchange for Pittencrief, the much more valuable lands of Munquhanny. The Countess Isabella, dau. of Earl Duncan, also bestowed many grants upon her "cousin" Sir Michael, who s. as chief of the family, in 1379, at the decease of Sir John Balfour of Balfour. He was s. by his eldest son,

SIR LAURENCE DE BALFOUR, of Strathor and Munquhanny, who, by Marjory his wife, had three sons. The 3rd, John, was of Balgarvey; the 2nd, David, was of Carrlodstone; and the eldest,

GEORGE DE BALFOUR, s. at his father's decease, to Munquhanny and Strathor. He had two sons, James, the younger, was of Ballo; the elder, SIR JOHN BALFOUR, fell at the siege of Roxburgh, in 1460, during his father's lifetime, leaving a son and heir,

SIR MICHAEL BALFOUR, 8th baron of Strathor, who m. Janet, dau. of Sir Andrew Ogilvy, of Inchmartin, and was father of

MICHAEL BALFOUR, of Munquhanny, an especial favourite of JAMES IV., who, in 1493, again erected his lands into a barony, to be called the Barony of Munquhanny. Sir Michael m. Majory, dau. of George Drury, of that ilk, and falling at Flodden, was s. by his only son,

ANDREW BALFOUR, of Munquhanny, who m. Janet, 3rd dau. of Sir Alexander Bruce, of Earlsball, and had seven sons, viz., 1 MICHAEL; 2 Sir Gilbert, of Westra, master of Queen Mary's household; 3 Sir James, of Pittendreich, who m. Margaret, dau. and heiress of Michael Balfour, of Burleigh, and from him descended the Lords Balfour of Burleigh, James, Lord Balfour of Clonawley, &c.; 4 David, ancestor of the BALFOURS of Grange; 5 George, Prior Commendator of Charterhouse; 6 Robert, provost of St. Mary's; and 7 John. The eldest son,

MICHAEL BALFOUR, younger of Munquhanny, m. Janet, dau. of Sir David Boswell, of Balnuto, and pre-deceasing his father, left a son,

SIR MICHAEL BALFOUR, of Munquhanny, who was served heir to his grandfather, 1592, and removed, in 1588, to Nolt land Castle, in the island of Westra, in Orkney, which he inherited from his cousin-german, Archibald Balfour, of Westra. He m. Mariota Adamson, dau. of Patrick, archbishop of St. Andrew's, and had two sons. The elder, Sir Andrew, of Strathor and Munquhanny, m. in 1589, Mary, dau. of Sir James Melville, of Halhill, but d. s. p., and was s. by his brother,

MICHAEL BALFOUR, of Garth, m. in 1593, Margaret, dau. of Malcolm Sinclair, of Quendal, archdean of Zetland, and was s. by his eldest son,

BANKES OF CORFE CASTLE.

BANKES, HENRY-JOHN-PERCIVAL, Esq. of Kingston Lacy, co. Dorset, b. 13 Feb. 1850.

Lineage.—The house of Bankes, which first settled in Dorsetshire temp. JAMES I., and which has since held a very high position amongst the ancient landed families of that county, derived descent from an ancestry of worth and respectability, who were, for many generations, established in a station of consideration in the old town of Keswick, in Cumberland. Among the title-deeds and papers now in the muniment room at Kingston Lacy, is the original grant from Henry VI., A.D. 1440, to the Bankes's of land at Borrodale, near Keswick, together with the black lead mine there, which is still possessed by the family. There are also subsequent deeds from Edward IV. and James I. confirming this grant. By reference to the registers of Keswick, the Bankes's may be traced back, through a tolerably long line of progenitors, holding the rank of gentry, down to

SIR JOHN BANKES (the son of John Bankes, Esq. by Jane Malton, his wife, and grandson of Ralph Bankes, Esq. by Anne Hassel, his wife), who was constituted LORD CHIEF JUSTICE of the Court of Common Pleas in 1640. He took part in the celebrated cause instituted in the Exchequer against the patriot HAMFEN, for his refusal to pay the arbitrary imposition of ship-money. By his wife Mary, (the gallant defender of Corfe Castle for King CHARLES), only

dst. of Robert Hawtrey, Esq. of Risolip, Sir John Bankes left at his decease in 1644, a son and successor,

Sir RALPH BANKES, of Corfe Castle, Knt., who m. Mary, only dau. and heir of John Bruen, Esq. of Athelhampton, and had, with a dau. Mary, who d. unm., an only son, JOHN, his heir. Sir Ralph dying about the year 1679, was s. by his son,

JOHN BANKES, Esq. of Kingston Hall, M.P. for Corfe Castle, who m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Henry Parker, by whom (who m. 2ndly, Thomas Lewis, Esq. of London), he had, with other children, who died issueless, two sons, JOHN and HENRY, and a dau. Mary, m. to Sir Thomas Farnham, Bart. He d. in 1714, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN BANKES, Esq. of Kingston Hall, M.P., who dying issueless in 1772, was s. by his brother,

HENRY BANKES, Esq. of Kingston Hall, barrister-at-law, king's counsel, M.P. for Corfe Castle, and one of the commissioners of the customs. He m. 1st, Eleanor, dau. of Richard Symonds, Esq. of London, and 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of the Right Rev. John Wynne, D.D., Bishop of Bath and Wells, and co-heir of her brother, the Right Hon. Sir W. Wynne, Knt., chief judge of the Prerogative Court and dean of the Arches. By the first lady, he had no issue. By the second he had a son, HENRY, his heir, and a dau. Anne. Mr. Bankes d. in 1776, and was s. by his only surviving son,

HENRY BANKES, Esq. of Kingston Hall, M.P. for Corfe Castle from 1780 to 1826, and for the co. of Dorset from that time until 1831. Mr. Bankes m. in 1784, Frances, dau. of William Woodley, Esq., governor of the Leeward Islands, and had (with two daus., Anne-Frances, m. to Edward, Earl of Falmouth; and Maria-Wynne, m. to the Hon. Thomas Stapleton) four sons, viz.,

Henry, lost at sea, in 1806.

WILLIAM JOHN, heir to his father.

GEORGE, successor to his brother.

Edward, of Soughton Hall, co. Flint, canon of Bristol, m. 1st, 1830, Lady Frances-Jane Scott, dau. of John, Earl of Edm., by whom he has issue; John Scott, J.P. and D.L., m. Anne, dau. of Sir John Jervis, lord chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas; Eldon-Surtees; and Frances. He m. 2ndly, 1839, Maria, 3rd dau. of the Hon. and Very Rev. Edward Rice, D.D.

Mr. Bankes d. 17 Dec. 1834, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM JOHN BANKES, Esq. of Kingston Lacy, M.P., who d. 17 April, 1855, and was s. by his brother,

THE RIGHT HONBLE. GEORGE BANKES, of Kingston Lacy, M.P., carrier baron, judge advocate in Lord Derby's ministry of 1852, and a privy councillor. He sat in Parliament for Corfe Castle until the disfranchisement of that borough by the Reform Bill; and afterwards, from 1841 up to the period of his decease, for the co. of Dorset. He m. Georgina-Charlotte, only dau. and heir of Sir Charles Edmund Nugent, G.C.H., admiral of the fleet, and had issue, Seat—Winstanley Hall, near Wigan.

* The family of Holme has been seated in Lancashire, in different branches, from a period shortly subsequent to the Norman conquest. The surname, which was originally and properly spelt Hulme, is local, and derived from the manor of that name between Trafford and Manchester, formerly possessed by the family.

In the third volume of Hollinshead's Chronicle, among the Norman gentlemen attending WILLIAM the Conqueror, is mentioned the "Seigneur de Hulme," but whether he was the father of Ranulph or Randalphus, who was possessed of Hulme about the end of the 11th century, is not clearly ascertained.

Kinship.—ROGER BERCHELAI, described in Domesday Book as holding land in Gloucestershire temp. EDWARD THE CONFESSOR, was the founder of the family of Berkeley or Barclay. His son, John Berchelai, accompanied Margaret, sister of Edgar Atheling, to Scotland, and was grandfather of Theobald de Berkeley, born circa 1110, whose two sons were HUMPHREY BERKELEY, a liberal benefactor to the monks of Aberbrothwick, and JOHN DE BERKELEY, living temp. ALEXANDER II. and ALEXANDER III., designed in a deed "Joannes de Berkeley, filius Theobaldi." He was father of ROBERT DE BERKELEY, who was in possession of an estate in the shire of Meath, temp. ALEXANDER III., and is designed in a deed "Robertus, fil. et her. Joannis filii Theobaldi." The next heir on record,

ALEXANDER DE BERCLAY, b. circa 1325, inherited the old family estate in the shire of Meath; and to him and Katherine his wife, William Keith, Marischal of Scotland, his brother-in-law, granted, in 1351, by charter confirmed by King David II., the lands of MATHERS: "Alexandro de Berclay et Sorori meae Spouse sue terras meas de Easter Mathers infra vicecomitatum Kincardine." From this Alexander, the estate of Mathers, thus granted, descended in regular succession, from father to son, through many generations, to

DAVID BARCLAY, of Mathers, b. 1580, who d. about 1650, having previously sold the property of Mathers. By Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Livingstone, of Dunipace, he left a son and successor,

COL. DAVID BARCLAY, b. 1610, who served with distinction under Gustavus Adolphus, and, on his return home, attained the rank of colonel during the great civil war. BARRY OF LEMLARA.

BARRY, GARRETT-STANDISH, Esq. of Leamlara, co. Cork, J.P. and D.L., & his father, Standish Barry, Esq., in April, 1823. Mr. Barry was the first catholic member of parliament elected by the county of Cork after the Act of Emancipation in 1829.

Lineage.—This branch of the once potent name of Barry, so influential under the successive Lords Barry, the Viscounts Buttevant, and the Earls of Barrymore, has enjoyed large possessions in the co. of Cork ever since the first incursion of the Anglo-Normans in the time of HENRY II. Many of their green acres have indeed fallen to the spoiler—and of the old Catholic families, which may not similarly complain?—in the confiscations, political and religious, that so frequently and so ruthlessly visited the land of their adoption, from the accession of the house of TUDOR to the extinction of the house of STUART. Those that remain, however, confer on the proprietor, by their title-deeds, an inheritance of six hundred years at least, transmitted through a continuous and unbroken succession of two and twenty generations.

GARRETT BARRY, who resided at Leamlara (then so written), in the co. of Cork, temp. RICHARD II. m. the dau. of Poer, of Shanganry, allied to the Lords Le Poer, and dying about the year 1390, was s. by his son,

JOHN BARRY, m. the dau. of O'Nunane, of Castle-keane, a very ancient Irish name, and had a son and heir,

GARRETT BARRY, father, by his wife, Miss White, of Imokilly, of

DAVID BARRY, of Leamlara, who m. a dau. of Barrett, of Ballineely, and had a son,

JOHN BARRY, who m. Catherine Roche, of the noble house of Fermoy, and was s. by his son,

GARRETT BARRY, of Leamlara, whose wife was Ellen McCarty, of Tuadmrumun. His son,

JOHN BARRY, of Leamlara, distinguished by the epithet of Leidhr, or the stout, m. Isabel Nagle, of Moncanimie, and had a son, GARRETT, his heir. By a grant from CHARLES I. in the 12th year of his reign (1636), the family estates were confirmed to this proprietor. John Barry was s. by his son,

GARRETT BARRY, Esq. of Leamlara, or Leamlara, who obtained from CHARLES II. a confirmatory grant of Leamlara. He m. Ellen, dau. of Daniel Duff O'Callill, by Ellen, his wife, dau. of McCarty Rough. He was s. at his decease by his son,

DAVID BARRY, Esq. of Leamlara, who m. Catherine, dau. of Standish Grady, Esq. of Elton, in the co. of Limerick, and was father of

STANDISH BARRY, Esq. of Leamlara, who m. in 1703, Eleanor, dau. of Thady Quin, Esq. of Adare, in the co. of Limerick, and had issue, three sons, DAVID, GARRETT, and John, who d. unm., and six daus., Catherine, m. to Joseph Anthony, Esq.; Elizabeth, wife of Patrick Lacy, Esq. of Miltown, co. Limerick, whose dau. was mother of Sir de Lacy Evans, K.C.B.; Margaret, m. to John Stack, Esq.; Mary, Eleanor, and Anne, wife of Simon Haly, Esq. of Ballyhaly. The eldest son,

DAVID BARRY, Esq. of Leamlara, dying without issue, was s. by his brother,

GARRETT BARRY, Esq. of Leamlara, who m. Mary-Anne Hussey, dau. of the Baron of Galtrim, and dying in 1766, left, with two daus., Anne, wife of Timothy Deasy, Esq.; and Eleanor, wife of Hatton Conron, Esq., a son,

Mr. Mynors-Baskerville assumed, in 1818, on succeeding to the property of Col. Baskerville, by sign-manual, the surname and arms of that ancient and eminent family. He served the office of high-sheriff for Wilts in 1827, and was formerly M.P. for Herefordshire.

Lineage.—The family of BASKERVILLE is one of the most ancient and honourable in England; its name is upon the roll of Battle Abbey; it has ever maintained the highest rank amongst the gentry, and it can boast of the blood of the PLASTAGENETS.

The Baskervilles came into Herefordshire soon after the Conquest, and settling at Erdley, became connected with the first families of the county, served the office of sheriff no less than twenty-one times, and were elected knights of the shire in eleven parliaments.

Their pedigree has been authentically deduced, and is duly registered in the College of Arms.

FROM SIR ROBERT BASKERVILLE, Knt. of Erdley Castle, co. Hereford, who m. Agnes, dau. and heiress of Nesta, dau. of Rees ap Griffith, Prince of South Wales, descended, through a line of knightly representatives,

SIR JOHN BASKERVILLE, Knt. of Combe, b. 12 Feb. 1403, who, in Sir Harris Nicolas's History of the Battle of Agincourt, is stated to have been in the retinue of HENRY V. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of John Touchet, Lord Audley, and dying 3rd Dec. 1455, was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JAMES BASKERVILLE, Knt. of Erdley, M.P. for the co. of Hereford in 1476, and sheriff 35th HENRY VI., 4th EDWARD IV., and 14th HENRY VII. He was made a Knight-Banneret on the field, after the battle of Stoke, near Newark, in 1487, and a Knight of the Bath, at the coronation of HENRY VII. He m. Katherine, dau. of Walter Devereaux, Lord Ferrers of Chartley, lineally descended from King EDWARD I., and had,

WALTER (Sir), his heir.

John, grandfather of SIR THOMAS BASKERVILLE, Knt. of Goodrest, co. Warwick, general of the English army in Picardy.

1. Harriet-Mary, m. 1838, to Charles-Henry Williams, Esq., youngest son of William Williams, Esq. of Tregulow, Cornwall.

II. Eleanor-Susan.

Lineage.—On the roll of Battel Abbey appears the name of BASSET, and in the Conqueror's survey. THURSTAN (or, as he is commonly written, THURSTINE) a Norman, held six hides of land in Drayton, co. Stafford. This Thurstine, according to Dugdale, was paternal ancestor of the several families bearing the name of BASSET, which rose into power and distinction very shortly after the Conquest, Odoericus Vitalis stating them to have been previously of baronial rank in Normandy.

JOHN BASSET, Esq. eldest son and heir of Sir John Basset, brother of George Basset, of Tehidy, Cornwall, and grandson of Sir John Basset, who acquired UMBERLEIGH and Heanton Court, Devon, by his marriage with Joan, sister and heir of Philip Beaumont, of Shirwell, Devon, m. Frances, dau. and co-heir of Arthur Plantagenet, Viscount Lisle, who surviving him, remarried Thomas Monk, of Potheridge, co. Devon, Esq., and was great-grandmother of the celebrated George Monk, Duke of Albemarle. By Frances Plantagenet Mr. Basset had issue,

SIR ARTHUR BASSET, of UMBERLEIGH, Knt., who m. Eleanor, dau. of Sir John Chichester, of Raleigh, Knt., and was father of

SIR ROBERT BASSET, Knt. of UMBERLEIGH, living in 1629, "who," says Prince, "being by his grandmother descended from the Plantagenets, and of the blood royal, in the beginning of King JAMES I.'s reign, made some pretensions to the crown of England, but not being able to make them good, he was forced to fly into France, to save his head." To compound for this as well as to maintain his expensive style of living, Sir Robert greatly injured his estate, and was necessitated to sell White Chapple, the ancient inheritance of his ancestors, and no less than thirty manors. He m. Elizabeth, 2nd dau. and co-heir of Sir William Peryam, Knt. chief baron of the Exchequer, and by her, who d. in 1635, aged 64, he had issue,

COL. ARTHUR BASSET, his son and heir, b. at Heanton Court in 1597, and d. 7 Jan. 1672, having m. a dau. and co-heir of Leigh of Burrough, co. Devon, by whom he had a son, who d. s. p. Col. Basset was a zealous royalist, and Prince, in his Worthies, gives a lengthened memoir of him. He was governor of St. Michael's Mount, when it was surrendered to the parliamentary forces, under Col. Hammond, in 1646, and is buried in the parish church of Heanton Panchardon, co. Devon, where a handsome monument is erected to his memory.

JOHN BASSET, Esq. his son, d. in 1660, aged 30, and is buried in Heanton church. He m. Susannah, dau. of Bluet, of Holcombe Regis, co. Devon, and left one son and heir,

JOHN BASSET, who succeeded to the estates on the decease of his grandfather. He was b. 1652, and d. 1686, having m. Elizabeth, dau. of Arthur Acland, of Bittadon, co. Devon, Esq., by whom he left issue,

BATES OF MILBOURNE.

BATES, JANE-ANNE, of Milbourne Hall, co. Northumberland, a her brother 1855.

Lineage.—The family of BATES has been established many centuries in the co. of Northumberland.

THOMAS BATES, Esq. of Ovington Hall, in Northumberland, M.P. for Morpeth, which he continued to represent in the reigns of MARY and ELIZABETH, appears to have been high in favour with the former queen, for we find her majesty addressing a complimentary letter to him in 1566-7. Thomas Bates was subsequently, during the reign of ELIZABETH, appointed supervisor of all her majesty's houses, lordships, manors, lands, and tenements in Northumberland. His great-grandson,

RALPH BATES, Esq. of Halliwell, East Hartford, &c., co. Northumberland, bapt. at Earsdon, 29 Aug. 1613, transmitted in 1666, to the Herald's Office, a pedigree of his family. He m. Margaret, dau. of Thomas Chaturou, of Butterby, and dying 11 March, 1690, aged 78, was s. by his eldest son,

RALPH BATES, Esq. of Halliwell, bapt. 16 Feb. 1646, whose son (by his 2nd wife, Anne, dau. of William James, Esq. of Washington),

RALPH BATES, Esq. of Halliwell, b. 8 Jan. 1688, succeeded to the family estates at the death, s. p., in 1734, of his half-brother, Thomas. He m. 1st, 6th May, 1714, Mary, dau. of John Bacon, Esq. of Staward, in Northumberland, by whom (who d. in March 1723), he had issue, Anne, wife of the Rev. Charles Stoddart; Isabella, m. to William Watson, Esq.; and Margaret, wife of Cuthbert Watson, Esq. Mr. Bates m. 2ndly, in 1725, his cousin, Isabel, eldest dau. of Richard Bates, Esq. of Newcastle-on-Tyne, and had further issue, RALPH, his heir; Thomas, whose eldest son, Col. Thomas Bates, m. a dau. of Sir Robert Waller, Bart., and has issue, Mary, m. in 1754, to Henry Wilson, Esq. of Newbottle; Esther, m. to Richard Wharton, Esq.; Elizabeth, d. w.m.; and Dorothy, m. 1st, to William Clayton, Esq. of Newcastle, and 2ndly, to — Brick, Esq. Ralph Bates, of Halliwell, a very active magistrate, d. 23 Nov. 1754, and was buried at St. Dunstan's in the West, London. His elder son and successor,

RALPH BATES, Esq. b. 14 May, 1730, sheriff for Northumberland in 1762, m. 1st, 16 July, 1759, Jane Mitford, by whom (who d. in childhood, 6 May, 1760) he had an only dau., Isabella-Jane, m. in 1786, to the Rev. Henry Ingilby, brother to the late Sir John Ingilby, Bart. of Ripley Castle. Mr. Bates m. 2ndly, in 1762, Anne, sister of the late Henry Ellison, Esq. of Hebburn Hall, and had (with other children who d. w.m.), RALPH, his heir; Richard, killed on board the "Arg," man-of-war, in 1783; Cuthbert; Hannah, m. in

1786, to John Hunter, Esq. of Lisburn; and Mary-Anne, m. in 1796, to the Rev. John Fawcett. Mr. Bates d. 2 Aug. 1783, and was s. by his eldest son, RALPH BATES, Esq. of Milbourne Hall, Halliwell, &c. b. 22 Oct. 1764, for many years lieut.-col. of the 6th (Enniskillen) dragoons. This gentleman, col.-commandant of the southern regiment of Northumberland local Militia, J.P. and D.L., served as high-sheriff in 1812. He m. 4 Dec. 1798, his second cousin, Sarah, 3rd dau. of the late Rev. Nathaniel Ellison, vicar of Bolam and Doddington, by Jane his wife, dau. and heiress of Col. Furdy, of Farington, Berks, and had two sons and three daus., viz., RALPH, NATHANIEL, JANE-ANNE, Sarah, and Georgiana, m. 8 March, 1843, the Rev. 1. Emily.

Lineage.—This family has been seated for nearly six centuries in the county of Somerset.

Its origin appears to have been Flemish. In the reign of EDWARD I., the leading merchants of the wool staple, trading with Flanders, and of Flemish origin, were Ingram de Beteyn, William de Beteyn, and John Beteyn.

Ingram de Beteyn also held lands in Wendover, co. Bucks, where Andrew Batyn, probably his son, was M.P. for Wycombe in 1307.

William Beteyn was sheriff of London, 1289, and a member of the Goldsmiths' Company. Richard Beteyn, goldsmith, probably his son, served as Mayor of London in 1357, and twice represented the city in parliament. He bore a conspicuous part in the dethronement of EDWARD II., and in sequence the city received extensive charters from EDWARD III. on his accession. His arms were for many hundred years in the Grey Friars' Church, Newgate, where he was interred.

Henry Batyn settled in Somersetshire, and was M.P. for Bath, 1297; from that time to the present his descendants have remained in that county.

For a period of 250 years this family occupied an important station at Bath, and in the adjoining counties. Thomas Batyn was steward of the priory of Bath in 1534. After the dissolution of monasteries, the family seem to have quitted Bath, one branch to have settled in Wiltshire, of which was SIR HENRY BATTEN, Knt., gentleman-pensioner to JAMES I., and another to have gone to the more western parts of the county, of which were ANDREW BATTEN, of Easton St. George, and JOHN BATTEN, of Michael Church, co. Somerset.

ANDREW BATTEN, of Easton, had a son, SIR WILLIAM BATTEN, Knt., one of the most eminent naval commanders in the civil wars; he was surveyor of the navy, 1638, vice-admiral of England from 1642 to 1647, and particularly distinguished himself at the sieges of Dartmouth, Lyme, and Portland Castle. He was appointed governor of Mount Batten, a fort which he built at Plymouth, and which is still existing. Though he served the parliament, he was sincerely attached to a constitutional monarchy, and averse to the designs of the army, to stop whose attempts upon the king's life, he revolted with the fleet to Prince CHARLES. On the Restoration, however, he was merely reinstated in his post of surveyor, and became M.P. for Rochester, till his death, in 1667. His issue in the male line is extinct.

JOHN BATTEN, of Michael Church, is the immediate ancestor of the line before us. In 1597, he is returned as having lands in Michael Church. From him sprang, in a direct line (with a dau., Grace, m. to John Fletcher), a son,

NATHANIEL-BUTLER BATTEN, Esq., b. 1713 (son of Robert Batten, the friend of Sir Richard Steele, and the author of the letters in the Spectator, vol. i, signed R. B.), sold his estate at Pitminster, and purchased the manor and advowson of Thorn Faulcon. He m. in 1738, Joanna, dau. and co-heiress of John Prigge, Esq., and had issue, JOHN PRIGGE, who m. Miss Wallis, and had issue, with dau., an only son, the late JOHN BATTEN, Esq. Mr. Butler Batten m. 2ndly, Miss Adams, and had issue,

BEARCROFT OF MEER HALL.

BEARCROFT, EDWARD, Esq. of Meer Hall, co. Worcester.

Lineage.—The estate of Meer Hall was possessed by the Bearcrofts, in lineal male descent, from 1337—and probably from a period long anterior—up to the year 1823, when it passed into the female line, whose heirs assumed the name and arms of BEARCROFT.

Meer Hall was built by Thomas Bearcroft, in 1337, the tenth year of EDWARD III.'s reign. It is a half-timber mansion, approached by a fine avenue of elms, with a wooded hill behind, forming a picturesque background.

In the great civil war, the Bearcroft of the day had the ill-luck to make himself somewhat too conspicuous on behalf of royalty. The consequence was, that Cromwell's troopers took possession of his house, converting the hall into stables, and applying the rest to purposes for which they were most certainly never intended by the original builder. Being set down, in the phrase of the triumphant party, for an inveterate and confirmed malignant, he was heavily fined, and his name still appears in the catalogue of those who were obliged to compound for their estates.

Seat—Meer Hall, Worcestershire.

Lineage.—The Bellows, of whom there were eighteen knights in a direct line of succession, and who were renowned in the middle ages, settled in Ireland, at Bellewstown, in the co. of Meath, and in the adjoining co. of Louth, in 1470. From Sir RICHARD BELLW descended Sir John Bellew, of Willystown, ancestor of Lord Bellew of Barmouth, of Sir Michael-Dillon Bellew, Bart. of Mount Bellew, in the co. of Galway, and of Sir Christopher Bellew, Knt., whose eldest son, Sir John, was created Baron Bellew of Duloch. The BELLWES of Devonshire derive from a common ancestor with the ennobled branches, and have for centuries held a very high position amongst the landed aristocracy of the West of England. Their pedigree can be traced in an unbroken line up to the period of the Norman Conquest.

JOHN BELLWE, lineally descended from Roger Bellewe, of Bellewstown, m. temp. King EDWARD IV., Amy, eldest dau. and co-heir of John Fleming, Esq. (of the very ancient house of FLEMING of Bratton Fleming), by his wife, the dau. and co-heir of Martin Ferrers, descended from Henry Ferrers, who held the manor of Beer Ferrers, in the co. of Devon, in the reign of EDWARD II., and had his castle there. By the co-heiress of Fleming, John Bellew had a son and successor,

PATRICK BELLWE, of Alverdiscott, in Devon, who m.

Anne, dau. of John Dennys, Esq. of Orleigh, in that shire and had a son and heir,

HENRY BELLWE, Esq. of Alverdiscott, who m. Alice, dau. and heir of William Colebrooke, by Jane, his wife, dau. and heir of Robert Calley, Esq. of Chymney, and had a son and successor,

WILLIAM BELLWE, Esq. of Ash Rogus, in Brampton, in Devonshire, who m. Anne, dau. of Sir Hugh Stukely, of Aston, in that co., and had a son,

HENRY BELLWE, Esq. of Stockleigh English, in the co. of Devon, living in 1564, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Amias Chichester, Esq. of Arlington, and dying in 1597, left a son,

PHILIP BELLWE, Esq. of Stockleigh Court, father of

WILLIAM BELLWE, Esq. of Yarncombe, who m. Rose Hill, and dying 1700, was s. by his son,

HENRY BELLWE, Esq. of Stockleigh Court, who m. and had one son, Henry, who d. s. p. in 1711. Mr. Bellew, surviving his only child, was s. at his decease, in 1719, by (the son of his brother William) his nephew,

HENRY BELLWE, Esq. of Stockleigh Court, who m. Frances, dau. of William Barbor, Esq. of Lary and Raleigh, in the co. of Devon, by Frances, his wife, the heiress of Poynts of Northote and Bettadown, and dying in 1752, left, with a dau., Frances, wife of Horatio Hele, Esq., three sons, of whom

HENRY BELLWE, Esq., captain R.N., s. his nephew at Stockleigh Court, and was a distinguished naval officer. He m. Anne, widow of Thomas Wentworth, Esq., but dying issueless, 18 April, 1791, aged 63, was s. by his brother,

JOHN BELLWE, Esq. of Stockleigh Court, who m. Philippa, Le Conte, an heiress, and d. in 1821, having had issue, JOHN-PILLET, who d. unm. in 1815; Henry, who d. in 1806; WILLIAM, successor to his father; Frances, who d. 22 Dec. 1840; and Philippa, who d. 6 Feb. 1841. The son and heir,

WILLIAM BELLWE, Esq. of Stockleigh Court, m. in 1798, Prestwood-Love, dau. of the Rev. John Froude, rector of Knowstone and Molland (of the family of FROUDE of Elmestone, in Devon), by his wife Prestwood-Love Legassick, and had issue, JOHN-PRESTWOOD, his heir; Henry, of Oakhampton Park, Somersetshire, m. Mary-Froude, 2nd dau. of H. Bawden, Esq., J.P., and has a son, Henry-Bawden and a dau., Ada-Mary; Frances; and CAROLINE, whom her aunt, Miss Bellew, made her heiress. Mr. Bellew d. 17 June, 1826, and was s. by his son, the present JOHN-PRESTWOOD BELLWE, Esq. of Stockleigh-Court.

Lineage.—SIR BENNET DE PENCLAWDD accompanied the CONQUEROR to England, and received for his services the lordship of Penclawdd, in Gower (the western extremity of Glamorgan).

That the family of which we are treating was settled there at that period, divers records fully substantiate.

Fuller, in his Church History, pp. 165, 166, quotes a MS. of Thomas Scriven, Esq.; also Fox, and the Chronicle of John Brompton; in proof that, amongst others, Bonet, or Benet, was one of "such persons as after the battle were advanced to seigneries in this land" [Glamorgan].

SIR HUMPHREY BENNET (son of Sir Benet de Penclawdd), a Elinor, dau. of Morgan Llewellyn ap Ivor, and thus acquired the estate of Kilgiffin, in the parish of Llanbader, in Monmouthshire. He was ancestor of

JOHN BENNETT, Esq., b. 1630 (2nd son of David Bennet, and uncle of John Bennet, of Kettle Hill, sheriff of Glamorganshire in 1695). He m. Mary Jones, of Laleston, dau. of Captain Thomas Jones of Frampton, in Glamorganshire, by his wife, Mary Turbervill of Ognore. By the heiress of Laleston (who d. 10 Dec. 1726), Mr. Bennet left, at his decease, in 1707, with other issue, a son,

WILLIAM BENNETT, Esq. of Laleston, who m. Mary, dau. of Richard Llewellyn, Esq. of Ynis-y-gorwen, in Glamorganshire, and had (with two daus., Jane, m. to Edward Gwynne, Esq. of Llantrissant; and Anne, m. to the Rev. Robert Davies) several sons, of whom the eldest,

THOMAS BENNETT, Esq. of Laleston, served the office of sheriff for Glamorganshire in 1768. He m. Mary dau. of Edward Walters, Esq. of Pitcot, sheriff in 1754, but dying issueless, 29 Jan. 1772, was s. by his brother, BLAIR OF BLAIR.

BLAIR, WILLIAM-FORDYCE, Esq. of Blair, co. Ayr, J.P. and D.L., captain R.N., b. 10 Sept. 1807; m. 23 July, 1840, Caroline-Isabella, youngest dau. of the late John Sprot, Esq. of London, and sister of Mark Sprot, of Kiddell, and by her (who d. 24 Oct. 1857) had issue,

I. WILLIAM-AUGUSTUS, b. 24 June, 1848.

II. Frederick-Gordon, b. 11 Nov. 1852.

I. Mary, II. Caroline-Madeline.

III. Adelaide-Gordon, b. 11 June, 1846; d. 22 July, 1848.

Lineage.—The BLAIRS of Blair, connected by intermarriages with the first families in the west of Scotland, have maintained, for upwards of six centuries, a high position in the co. of Ayr. They claim the chieftainship of all the BLAIRS in the south and west of Scotland; but the BLAIRS of Ballygock, settled in the counties of Fife, Perth, and Angus, dispute the honour with them. JAMES VI., to whom the point was referred, determined that "the oldest man, for the time being, of either family, should have the precedence." Both families appear to be equally ancient, but the belief that they spring from the same ancestry is extremely doubtful, their shields and arms bearing no affinity the one to the other.

So far back as 1305, William de Blair occurs in a contract between Ralph de Eglinton and the town of Irvine. His grandson, Sir BRYCE BLAIR, of Blair, was one of the patriots associated with Wallace, in defence of the liberties of Scotland; and in more recent times, the troublesome period of the great civil war, another Sir Bryce Blair, of Blair, adhered with unshaken loyalty, to King CHARLES I., by whom he was knighted.

MADALENE BLAIR, (the eventual heiress of this eminent house, only dau. of William Blair, of Blair, son and heir of William Blair, of Blair, by the Lady Margaret Hamilton, his wife, dau. of William, 2nd Duke of Hamilton), m. William Scott, Esq., advocate, second son of John Scott, Esq. of Malleny, in Midlothian, (an ancient branch of Buccleuch), and had a son, WILLIAM, her heir. The heiress of Blair d. probably before the year 1715, and Mr. Scott, her widower, who had assumed the surname of BLAIR, m. 2ndly, Catherine, only dau. of Alexander Tait, of Edinburgh, merchant, and had by her five sons and six daus.; viz., 1 HAMILTON, heir to his half-brother; 2 Alexander, surveyor of the customs at Port Glasgow, m. Elizabeth, only dau. of John Hamilton, Esq. of Grange, and had issue; 3 John, captain of infantry, killed at Minden, in 1759; 4 Thomas, cornet in the Scots Greys, killed at the battle of Vald, in 1747; 5 William, an officer, slain at Oswego, in India, in 1756; 1 Ann, m. to David Blair, Esq. of Adamton; 2 Madaline, m. to Sir William Maxwell, Bart. of Monreith; 3 Janet, m. to Alexander Tait, Esq., one of the principal clerks of session; 4 Barbara, m. to William Fullarton, Esq. of that ilk; 5 Catherine, d. unm.; 6 Mary, m. to Sir John Sinclair, Bart. of Stevenston. Madalene Blair was s. at her decease by her son,

WILLIAM BLAIR, Esq. of Blair, who d. unm. in 1732, and was s. by his half-brother,

HAMILTON BLAIR, Esq. major, Scots Greys. He m. Jane, dau. of Sydenham Williams, Esq. of Herrington, co. Dorset, and dying in 1782, left (with two daus., Agatha, m. to Lieut-General Avarne; and Jane, m. to Robert Williams, Esq. of Cerne Abbas, co. Dorset) a son and successor,

WILLIAM BLAIR, Esq. of Blair, M.P. for Ayrshire. He m. Madalene, dau. of the late John Fordyce, Esq. of Aytoun, co. Berwick, and by her, who d. in 1817, had issue, Hamilton, capt. R.N., d. 21 May, 1816.

BLAKE OF HORSTEAD.

BLAKE, THOMAS, Esq. of Horstead, co. Norfolk, a fellow of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, LL.D., an advocate, Doctors' Commons, London, J.P. and D.L., b. 13 March, 1790.

Lineage.—This family, believed to have migrated from Wiltshire or from Somersetshire in the reign of JAMES I., settled at Bunwell, in Norfolk, about the year 1620, where, and afterwards at Scottow, in the same county, it has been resident for several generations.

JOHN BLAKE, Gent. of Bunwell, was admitted to copyhold lands in Bunwell in 1638 and 1639; and d. 1646, leaving a son,

JOHN BLAKE, Gent. of Bunwell, born before the family settled at Bunwell. He m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Thomas Welbes or Welby, of Moulton; and 2ndly (sett. dated May, 1692) Samanna, dau. of John Stebbing, Gent. of Stoke, co. Suffolk. By his first wife, he had four sons, three of whom, Thomas, John, and Samuel, and their descendants resided at Bunwell, New Buckenham, and at Roydon, but are now extinct there; and Robert was the fourth son, of whom we treat. Mr. Blake, whose tombstone is in the chancel of Bunwell church, and bears the arms of Blake, of Wilts or Somersetshire, with a fleur-de-lis, the difference of a younger branch, d. Aug. 1686, and, as appears by his will in the office at Norwich, devised lands in Bunwell, Hempsall, Wymerham, Aslacton, Cranworth, and Moulton, to his several sons. The fourth son, ROBERT BLAKE, b. 1655, removed to Scottow, where, about 1680, he built a good mansion house. He m. 1. Amelie-Anna.

II. Eleanor-Elizabeth.

Lineage.—RICHARD CADDELL, alias BLAKE, sheriff of Connaught in 1366, was the ancestor of the many distinguished families of the name in Ireland, and of the BLAKES of Langham, co. Suffolk, and Trisel Castle, co. Durham, both English baronets.

The remarkable petition presented by John Blake alias Caddle, eldest and lineal descendant of Richard Caddo alias Blake, sheriff of Connaught, 1306, to the Commissioners of Plantation in Connaught, 1640, and the commissioner's report thereon, with other family documents, satisfactorily prove the origin and descent of this old family from their first coming to Connaught.

RICHARD CADDELL, alias BLAKE, purchased several manors from Thomas Stobridge, in 1515, in addition to which he got grants in the reigns of EDWARD I. and II. He had four sons, Walter; John; Thomas-Niger; and Valentine.

WALTER, eldest son of Richard, got a grant of the customs of Galway; he had five sons, John; Henry, attainted for joining the rebellion of the De Burghs; Nicholas; Walter; and William Fitz Walter Fitz Richard, from whom Lord Walscourt and the BLAKES of Ballinacrad are descended.

JOHN-OGG BLAKE, eldest son of Walter, m. Margaret, dau. of Philip Le Brun, of Athenry, by whom he had three sons, Henry; Walter; and Geoffrey. In the 13th of RICHARD II., divers lands about Athenry were granted to John and Henry, his heirs. John d. 1420, and was s. by his eldest son, HENRY-FITZ JOHN, who m. Mary, dau. of Dermingham of Athenry, and had five sons, John; Nicholas; Thomas; Walter; and Richard. He got a grant of land in the co. Galway, 2nd HENRY VI. This Henry and several members of the Blake family, in 1435, joined in giving grants to the church of Saint Nicholas, Galway, and subsequently, in 1445, they had an amicable division of their landed possessions.

JOHN BLAKE, eldest son of Henry, m., and had two sons, Valentine and William, and a dau. Julian, m. to Peter Lynch. He d. in 1488, and was s. by his son and heir.

VALENTINE BLAKE, who m. Julian, dau. of Geoffrey Lynch, by whom he had, John, his heir; Valentine; Thomas, ancestor of the BLAKES of Menlough (Barts.) Towerhill, and Drum; William; and Annetasia, m. to William Browne, of Galway. He d. 1490, and was s. by

JOHN BLAKE, his eldest son, who m. Evelina Skerret, and had, Nicholas, his heir; Richard, ancestor of the BLAKES of Kittullagh (now Fritchfort), and of the BLAKES of Cregg Castle; and John-Fitz-John; with a dau. Julian, m. to — Bodkin. The eldest son, NICHOLAS BLAKE, mayor of Galway, 1555, m. 1st, Gennet, dau. of James Ffrench, and 2ndly, 1550, Celia, dau. of Walter Lynch, by whom he had, John, his heir, and a dau., Evelina. He d. in 1564, and was s. by his son,

JOHN BLAKE, who m. Celia Skerret, and had, Nicholas, and Walter-Fitz-John; he d. 1578, and was s. by his son, NICHOLAS BLAKE, mayor of Galway, 1564, who m. Julian, dau. of Valentine Ffrench, and had, John, his heir; Martin; James; Nicholas; and Mary. He d. 1622, and was s. by his eldest son, JOHN BLAKE, who m. Mary Ffrench, and was mayor of Galway, 1646: in 1640 he presented a petition to the Commissioners of the Plantation of Connaught, accompanied by his pedigree and other ancient documents, upon which they certified that he was the lineal and eldest descendant of Richard Caddle, alias Blake, sheriff of Connaught, 1306, and awarded him the claimed properties. He had, Thomas, his heir; John; Nicholas; and Henry (John went to Montserrat, Nicholas and Henry to Barbadoes) and a dau. Catherine.

THOMAS BLAKE (eldest son of John), of Mullaghmore and Windfield, m. Mary, eldest dau. of Nicholas Blake, of Kittullagh, in 1658, and had, JOHN, his heir; Nicholas; Catherine; Julia, m. to Philip Butler; and Mary, m. to Bartley-Lynch Fitz Ambrose. The eldest son, JOHN BLAKE, m. Julian Lynch, and had, with other issue, Thomas, his heir; and Mark, (whose eldest son, Valentine, became the head of the Blake family on the death of the three sons of Thomas Blake without issue, while John, his 2nd son, came into the possession of the Mullaghmore and Windfield estates under the will of his first-cousin John Blake, of Windfield).

THOMAS BLAKE, eldest son of John, m. Anne, dau. of John Bodkin, of Annagh, by his 1st wife, Miss Browne, of Coolarn, by whom he had John, his heir; Martin; and Marcus, neither of whom had a family; Mary, m. Michael Browne, of Cloonkeely and Moyne; Ellen, m. James Kelly; Bridget, m. Andrew Concanon; Catherine, m. — McDermot; and Margaret, m. — Fitz Maurice. The eldest son,

JOHN BLAKE, s. to his father's extensive estates; he m. Miss Kirwan, of Cregg, but d. s. p. in 1789. His uncle,

MARK BLAKE, Esq. of Renvyle, m. Miss French, of Carrroes, co. Galway, and had, with other issue, of which one dau. m. George Davies, Esq. of Martinstown, co. Roscommon, and another m. George Taaffe, Esq. of Strokes-town, two sons,

I. VALENTINE, his heir.

II. John, of Windfield, J.P., who m. Mary, dau. of Christopher Bowen, Esq. of Hollymount, co. Mayo, a branch of BOWEN of Bowen's Court, and d. in 1812, leaving issue,

1. Christopher-John, of Windfield, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of John Burke, Esq. of St. Clara's, and d. 14 March, 1820, leaving a son, John Bowen, who d. in minority in 1823, and two daus., Elizabeth, and Maria.

2. Henry-Martin, of The Heath, co. Mayo, b. in 1796, d. 1857: m. twice: by his first wife he left a son, JOHN-HENRY, b. 1819, a magistrate for co. Mayo, and capt. 4th royal Lancashire Lt. inf. militia; and by his second, Nichola Frances-Charlotte, 3rd dau. of Robert French, Esq. of Monivae Castle, co. Galway, he had several children.

1. Anna-Maria, m. to William-M. Burke, Esq. of Ballydugan, co. Galway. (See that family.)

The elder son,

VALENTINE BLAKE, Esq. of Lehinch and Renvyle, high-sheriff of Mayo, m. in 1788, Anna-Maria, dau. of the Hon.

and Rev Richard Henry Roper, of Clones, son of Henry, 8th Lord Teynham, by Anne, Baroness Dacre, his wife; and by her, who m. 2ndly, James Shuttleworth, Esq. of Barton Lodge, co. BLAKE OF KILTULLAGH AND FRENCH-FORT.

BLAKE, THEOBALD-MICHAEL, Esq. of Kiltullagh and Frenchfort, J.P., b. Jan. 1829; m. Nov. 1854, Elizabeth, dau. and heir of James Blake, Esq. of Vermont, co. Galway, and has issue.

Lineage.—This is another branch of the Blake family, descended from Richard Caddle, alias Blake, sheriff of Connaught, in 1806; but more immediately from Richard, second son of John Blake (sixth in descent from the founder), by his wife Eveline Skerrett. Richard-Fitz-John filled the office of Mayor of Galway in 1533. On a division of the property (between the Blakes), the castle of Kiltullagh and some of the adjoining townlands fell to the lot of Richard. This was part of the estate purchased by Richard Caddle, alias Blake, from Thomas Hobridge, in 1515.

The castle of Kiltullagh was built by a person of the name of McWelycke, whose grandson, John McWelycke, in 1557, filed a bill in Chancery against Richard and Nicolas Blake, seeking compensation for the loss his grandfather sustained in building the castle of Kiltullagh. The Lord Chancellor, Sir Thomas Cusack, ordered Richard Blake to pay to complainant, John McWelycke, a small annuity for life, inasmuch as his grandfather built the castle, under the impression that he held the lands in perpetuity, whereas he only held them for a term of fourscore years. This, perhaps, is the earliest instance of tenant-right on record.

JOHN-FITZ-RICHARD succeeded to his father's property. He served as mayor of Galway in 1578; and m. in 1580, Julian-Browne, by whom he had,

NICOLAS-FITZ-JOHN, his heir, who m. s. by his eldest son,

* There was in possession of this lady a curious jewel, of which the account is as follows, copied from the will of Gabriel Barbor:

"Mr. Barbor (the father of my great-grandfather), for his firm adherence to the Protestant religion, was in Queen Mary's reign brought into Smithfield to suffer at the stake, but whilst he was taking leave of certain friends, news came the queen was dead, so that the Popish party did not dare to put him to death. In remembrance of so eminent a preservation, the said Mr. Barbor had the effigies of Queen Elizabeth cut out upon a stone, bequeathing the jewel to his eldest son, if he had a daughter and named her Elizabeth, otherwise the jewel should descend to the 2nd son if the condition was fulfilled by him, but if not, then to the 3rd son, and so on. This is ye account as it has been handed down from father to son, and hitherto there has been an Elizabeth in the family." Aug. 24, 1734.

Mr. Blount m. 2ndly, 1850, Lucy-Catherine, 4th dau. of James Wheble, Esq. of Bulmershe, Berks.

Lineage.—This ancient and distinguished family can be traced from the Counts of Guisnes, in Picardy, a race of nobles descended from the Scandinavian rulers of Denmark. RODOLPH, 3rd Count of Guisnes, had three sons by his wife Rosetta, dau. of the Count de St. Poi, all of whom accompanied the Norman in his expedition against England, in 1066. One of the brothers returned to his native country; the other two adopted that which they had so gallantly helped to win, and abided there; of these, SIR WILLIAM LE BLOUNT, the younger, was a general of foot, at Hastings, and was rewarded by grants of seven lordships in Lincolnshire; his son was seated at Saxlingham, in Norfolk, and the great grand-dau. of that gentleman, sole heiress of her line, MARIA LE BLOUNT, marrying in the next century, Sir Stephen le Blount, the descendant and representative of her great great-great-uncle, SIR ROBERT LE BLOUNT, united the families of the two brothers.

SIR WALTER BLOUNT (son of Sir John le Blount, of Sodington, by Eleanor his 2nd wife, dau. and co-heir of John, Lord Beauchamp of Hache), so celebrated for his martial prowess in the warlike times of EDW. III., RICH. II., and HENRY IV., and immortalized by the muse of Shakespeare for his devotion, even unto death, to King HENRY, fell at the battle of Shrewsbury, 23 June, 1403, leaving, by his wife, Donna Sancha de Ayala, dau. of Don Diego Gomez de Toledo, with two daus., four sons, viz., JOHN (Sir), his heir, K.G., who d. s. p.; THOMAS, successor to his brother; JAMES (Sir), ancestor of the BLOUNTS of Graddon, Elderfield, Orleton, &c.; and Peter, who d. s. p. SIR THOMAS BLOUNT, of Milton Ross, co. Leicester, who d. in 1468 and was s. by his son,

RICHARD BLOUNT, who m. Elizabeth, only dau. and heir of William de la Ford, of Iver, in the co. of Buckingham, by whom he acquired the estate in that place, and purchasing the manor of Maple-Durham Gurney, in the co. of Oxford, 1 Feb. 1489, fixed his permanent abode there. He served the office of sheriff for Bucks and Bedfordshire in 1502. He d. 31 Nov. 1508, and was s. by his son,

SIR RICHARD BLOUNT, of Maple-Durham Gurney, one of the gentlemen of the chamber to King HENRY VIII.; of the privy chamber to EDWARD VI., and lieutenant of the Tower, temp. ELIZABETH. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Richard Lister, chief-justice of England, and sister of Sir Michael Lister, K.B., and dying 11 Aug. 1564, was s. by his elder son,

SIR MICHAEL BLOUNT, of Maple-Durham, b. in 1533, lieutenant of the Tower. In 1581 (4 Feb.) he purchased the manor of Maple-Durham Chawsey, for 900*l.*, and soon after erected the fine mansion of Maple-Durham, still existing in the most perfect state. He was sheriff of Oxfordshire in 1586 and 1597. He m. Mary, sister and co-heir of Thomas Moore, Esq. of Bicester, in Oxfordshire, by whom (who d. 23 Dec. 1592) he had, with other issue, a son and successor,

SIR RICHARD BLOUNT, Knt. of Maple-Durham, b. 25

June, 1564; m. 1st, Cicilly, dau. of Sir Richard Baker, of Easinghurst, in Kent, and had, with other issue, CHARLES (Sir), his heir. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Francis Moore, Knt. of Fawley, in Berkshire, and had by her a dau., Jane, m. to Sir William Moore, of Fawley, and two sons, of whom the elder, WILLIAM, of Kidmore End, m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Ralph Delavel, and had a son, LISTER, of whom presently. Sir Richard d. 22 Nov. 1619, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR CHARLES BLOUNT, Knt. of Maple-Durham, who was slain fighting under the king's banner, at Oxford, 1 June, 1644. He m. Dorothy, dau. and sole heir of Sir Francis Clarke, Knt. of Houghton Conquest, in Bedfordshire, and by her had (with two daus., of whom the elder, Anne, m. 1st, John Swinburne, Esq. of Capheaton, and 2ndly, Francis Godfrey, Esq.) two sons, MICHAEL, who was killed in 1649, and WALTER. The 2nd son,

BODKIN OF ANNAGH.

BODKIN, ROBERT, Esq. of Annagh, co. Galway, J.P., high-sheriff in 1833-4, b. 20 March, 1809; m. 30 June, 1842, Elizabeth, youngest dau. and co-heiress of the late Thomas Redington, Esq. of Rye-hill, in the county Galway.

Lineage.—The family name was originally FITZGERALD. A younger son of the ancient and powerful family of FITZGERALD went to Connaught in the 13th century, and settled in Athenry, as most of the Anglo-Normans did at that period. A descendant of his had BOWDEKINE added to his name, which was retained, and the original discontinued in a similar manner to that by which the descendants of the Caddles took the name of Blake. The motto of their ancestors the Fitzgeralds is that of the Bodkins of the present day.

The Bodkins took an active part in the affairs of Athenry in the time of EDWARD III.: many of the family removed to Galway in the succeeding reign, that of RICHARD II., where they gave their name to a street, and at that early period Thomas Bodkin, and his son Henry were, in and about the town, extensive proprietors. In 1455, John Bodkin was compositior of the customs. Members of the family were frequently elected provosts of Athenry; Richard Bodkin, a Burgess of Galway, was provost of Athenry in 1454. A great many of the family became mayors and sheriffs for the town of Galway up to the time when it surrendered to Sir Charles Coote in 1652. So attached were they to their religion and king, that not a single member of the Bodkin family signed the articles of assent on that occasion; it appears by the returns of the town-major of Galway to the commissioners of the Commonwealth, in 1652, that the representatives of six of the Bodkin family refused to sign, and that ten others were absent. During the short reign of JAMES II., many of the ancient Roman Catholic families returned to Galway; amongst them, JOHN BODKIN FITZ-AMBROSE, of Annagh, who is mentioned in the charter that JAMES II. granted to the citizens of Galway.

JOHN BODKIN, mayor of Galway, 1618, was s. by his eldest son,

AMBROSE BODKIN, sheriff of Galway in 1570, who m. Julian, dau. of John Blake, by his wife Evelina Skerrett, and was father of

JOHN BODKIN, who had two sons, JOHN FITZ-JOHN, his heir, and Richard Fitz-John,

AMBROSE BODKIN FITZ-JOHN, m. the dau. of Alderman Andrew Browne Fitz-Dominick, of Galway. This Ambrose absented himself from Galway on the surrender to Sir Charles Coote in 1652; he got grants of the following lands, that is to say, Annagh, Kilmoyland, and several other denominations. He d. in 1679, and was s. by his son,

JOHN BODKIN FITZ-AMBROSE, who d. in 1669, leaving three sons, RICHARD FITZ-JOHN, his heir; John Fitz-John; and Patrick Fitz-John. He was admitted a freeman of Galway by charter of JAMES II. John was s. by his son,

Lineage.—SIR GUILHEM DE BONARE, the first of this family, with whom we commence the Scottish branches, settled in North Britain under King William the Lion (ante 1200), as feudal Baron of Bonare, in Perthshire, having given to the lands assigned to him in fief his own name, which is still borne to this day by the village of Bonar, situate at the foot of a hill, on the summit of which stand the ruins of Castle Bonar. This knight, whom we may call in this pedigree WILLIAM, 1st feudal Lord of Bonare, bore "Azure, two swords crossed saltier-ways, argent." He was s. by his son,

WILLIAM, 2nd feudal lord, who lived temp. King ALEXANDER II. (1230), and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM-ROGER DE BONAR, 3rd feudal lord, who took the cross (in 1248-9), and joined the sixth Crusade, with the other Scottish knights, whom King ALEXANDER III. sent to Palestine under the banner of St. Louis. Of the issue of William-Roger, the Crusader, two sons alone are known,

WILLIAM, Master of Bonare.

John, of Lainsde, who migrated to Flanders, and was author of several lines which flourished both in that country and in Sweden, Poland, Moravia, Silesia, and Breslau.

The eldest son,

WILLIAM BONAR, 4th feudal lord, royal seneschal of Kyngsborne on the coast of Fife, temp. King ALEXANDER III., was s. by his son,

WILLIAM BONAR, 5th feudal lord, royal seneschal of Kyngsborne, temp. King ROBERT I., a zealous follower of Sir William Wallace. He fought at Bannockburn in 1314, under the banner of ROBERT THE BRUCE. His only son,

WILLIAM-ROBERT BONAR, 6th feudal lord, royal seneschal of Kyngsborne, temp. Kings ROBERT I. and DAVID II. He fought at the battle of Halidon Hill in 1333. By Margaret his wife, of the family of Wemyss of that ilk, he had issue, i. JOHN, his heir; ii. JAMES, of Bonarton, founder of that line, and ancestor of other branches, which flourished in Poland and Silesia. The last seneschal of Kyngsborne was killed at the battle of Durham in 1346. His son and heir,

JOHN BONAR, 7th feudal lord of Bonare, was at the siege of Carveroc in 1355, and was still living in 1380. He m. Anne, of the RAMSAYS of Dalhousie, and left the following issue,

WILLIAM, his heir.

James of Rossie, founder of the Rossie family.

John, of Friarton, another of that line (of which James, the first, was killed at Flodden).

Sir John de Bonare was s. by his son,

WILLIAM BONAR, of Bonare, who is the first of this family whom we find designated as feudal lord of Keltie (which afterwards became the chief barony of the family). He served in the French wars under the Bastard of Orleans, who led a body of Scottish knights to the king's aid, and thus gained the victories of Beaugé, in 1421, and of Verneuil, in

1424, over the English. By his marriage with Christian Balfour, of the BALFOURS of Burleigh, he left,

I. JOHN, his heir.

II. WILLIAM, of Keltie, who fought with his father and brother at Arbroath and Bannockburn. He d. in 1478, leaving issue,

1 NINIAN, successor to his uncle.

2 David, of Wester Keyth, who was wounded and made prisoner at Flodden. He m. Janet Barclay, of Touch, and left a son, DAVID, of Wester Keyth, living in 1548, whose wife was Mary Kircaldy, heiress of Lumquhat. By her he had David, of Wester Keyth, who d. s. p.; Alexander, d. s. p.; John, of Lumquhat, living in 1573, father of JOHN, 2nd of Lumquhat, who appears in several charters of the years 1589, 1592, 1593, 1594, and 1597. He had issue,

JOHN, 3rd of Lumquhat, A.D. 1610, whose son, JOHN, 4th of Lumquhat, d. s. p.

HARRYE, of Gregston, ancestor of the BONARS of Gregston, represented by WILLIAM-GRAHAM BONAR, of Gregston.

3 John, abbot of Balmerinoch.

III. Robert, of Strathly Bonar, ancestor of the BONARS of Strathly and Coulle, both extinct.

IV. James, of Bonahallo, living in 1562, who m. Anne Inglis, dau. of Tarvat, and left (with another son, William, of Drumdownie), a successor.

JOHN, of Kilgraston, who was at Flodden. By Jean his wife, of the Arnotts of that ilk, he left a son,

JOHN, of Kilgraston, living in 1531, who left by Agnes, dau. of Grahame of Garvock, a dau., Isabel, m. to Blair of Pitkellicie, and a son and heir,

JOHN, of Kilgraston. He m. previously to 1608, Rosina, of the MURRAYS of Auchtertyre, and left, I. JOHN, his heir; II. Robert; III. Matthew; IV. Walter, flar of Garvock, whose only son, Andrew, of Glassmouth, was tutor of Keltie, and left a son, David, of Burntisland, also tutor of Keltie; V. Helen, m. to Craigmile of Dumbarny; VI. Katherine, m. to Maitland. The elder son who s. his father, as

JOHN, of Kilgraston, m. in 1634, Agnes, dau. and heir of Laurence Grahame, of Callander, a scion of Montrose; and left by her, I. JOHN, Master of Kilgraston, in right of his mother, representative and heir of line of GRAHAME of Callander; II. Alexander, of Tullochmair, author of that line; III. James, of Gregston, who carried on that line, having m. his kinswoman, Mary, heiress of Gregston. The elder son, JOHN BONAR, of Kilgraston, became eventually, at the decease of William Bonar, of Keltie, chief of the house of Bonar: of him in the sequel.

William Bonar dying in 1469, was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN BONAR, 2nd feudal lord of Keltie, who had fought with his father and brother at Arbroath, in 1445, and at Bannockburn in 1448. By his marriage with Margaret, of the SETONS of Parbroath, he had an only son, Ninian, Master of Bonare, who d. in infancy, whereupon the representation of the family devolved on John's nephew,

NINIAN BONAR, Baron of Keltie, eldest son of William of Keltie, and grandson of William of Bonare. He was created knight-banneret on the field of Caugler (or Sauchyburn, as it is often called), in 1488, in which he saved the life of King JAMES, by whose side he was afterwards killed at Flodden, in 1513. He m. ante 1505, Margaret Oliphant, Lady of Dron, sole dau. and heirrix of John Oliphant, of Dron, Dumbarny, Pitcaithly, and Bluzean, son and heir of Thomas, of Dron, who was 2nd son of Walter, 6th of Aberdalgy, who was son of John, of Aberdalgy, and grandson of Walter, 4th of Aberdalgy, eldest son and heir of Walter, 3rd of Aberdalgy, Gask, &c., by the Princess Elizabeth of Scotland, dau. of King ROBERT I. Sir Ninian fell at Flodden, 9 Sept. 1513. Sir Ninian was s. by

WALTER BONAR, 2nd Baron of Keltie, who had been at Flodden under his father's banner. He m. Beatrice, of the HAYS of Errol, by whom he had a dau., Isabel, m. to Charles, of the RUTHERFORDS of Fairylex, and two sons,

WILLIAM, Master of Keltie, and John, of Trevor. Sir Walter resigned his barony into the Queen's hands by deed dated at Keltie, 23 Feb. 1535, in favour of his son,

WILLIAM BONAR, who fought at the battle of Pinkie, in 1547. He m. his cousin Margaret, Lady Abercromby, dau. of Lord Oliphant, by whom he had, i. NINIAN, Master of Keltie, d. s. p. m.; ii. Robert, of Cardness, of whom hereafter, as 7th Baron of Keltie; i. Janet, m. in 1571, to her cousin Grahame, 5th Baron Garvoek. After the death of Lady Abercromby, he m. 2ndly, his cousin Nicoline, dau. of Murray of Philiphaugh, by whom he had Margaret, m. to Henderson, treasurer of the Orkneya. The 2nd son,

ROBERT BONAR, m. Margaret, of the SANDILANDS of Torphichen, by whom he had six children, of whom Isobel, m. her cousin, Oliphant of Over Cultuquahine, (and their dau., Isobel, m. Ninian, 10th Baron of Keltie;) Margaret, m. Stewart of Cuthills, Sheriff of Perth; Catherine, m. her cousin Rutherford, of Nether Balquhaine. Robert of Keltie resigned his barony, by instrument dated Keltie, 3 Feb. 1630, in favour of his eldest son,

BOSVILLE OF RAVENFIELD.

BOSVILLE, THOMAS-BOSVILLE, Esq. of Ravenfield Park, co. York, J.P., b. 4 May, 1799; m. in Aug. 1829, Harriet, dau. of William Jackson, Esq., deputy-com. gen., and widow of Samuel Petrie, Esq. Mr. Bosville, 2nd son of the late Robert-Newton Lee, Esq. of Louth and Littlecoate, assumed, by royal license, in 1829, the surname of BOSVILLE, in lieu of his patronymic, LEE, upon succeeding to the Ravenfield estate, on the death of his kinsman, the late Lieut.

Col. Thomas-James Bosville, in accordance with the will of the Rev. Thomas Bosville, of Ravenfield.

Lineage.—There are few families in England which can be traced, by means of authentic evidences, through so many centuries, as that of Bosville.

The surname is found in England from nearly the time of the Conquest, when, in all probability, it was introduced. In a charter of Humphrey de Bohun, dated in 1198, a William de Bosville appears as a witness. In a chartulary of the abbey of Warden, in Bedfordshire, a William de Bosville is spoken of as his knight by Geoffrey de Maundeville, the Earl, that is, of Essex; and Michael, son of William de Bosville, was an early benefactor to the same house. The senior branches, seated at New Hall, Darfield, at Gunthwaite, co. York, and at Bradbourn, co. Kent, are all now extinct in the male line.

THE REV. THOMAS BOSVILLE, vicar of Braithwell, eldest son of Thomas Bosville, Esq. of Braithwell, by Alice his wife, who recorded his pedigree at Sir William Dugdale's Visitation in 1666, d. in 1674, leaving (with two daus.) an only son,

THE REV. THOMAS BOSVILLE, vicar of Braithwell, and rector of Sandal Parva, near Doncaster, who m. Elizabeth, only child of Alexander Hatfield, Esq., and dying in 1711, left, with four daus., six sons,

i. Thomas, B.D., rector of Ufford, co. Northampton; who d. in 1718, aged 49, leaving, by Elizabeth his wife, sister and co-heir of John Bolle, Esq. of Thorpe Hall, co. Lincoln, three daus., his co-heirs,

1 Margaret, who m. James Birch, Esq. of Coventry; and d. in 1778, leaving two sons and one dau.; the 2nd son, the Rev. James Birch, d. in 1829, aged 84; the eldest son, THOMAS BIRCH, of Thorpe Hall, Esq., was father of LIEUT.-COL. THOMAS-JAMES BIRCH, of Thorpe, of whom presently, as successor to the Ravenfield estate; the only dau., Elizabeth Birch, m. Robert Lee, of Louth and Littlecoate, and d. in 1819, leaving an only son, Robert-Newton Lee, Esq. of Coldrey, Hants, who m. in 1793, Harriet-Elizabeth, dau. of the Rev. Joseph Warton, D.D., head-master of Winchester College, and d. in 1837, leaving, with junior issue, Robert-Newton Lee, Esq. of Taunton, and THOMAS-BOSVILLE LEE, who s. to Ravenfield at the decease of his kinsman, Col. Bosville, in 1829, and having assumed the surname and arms of BOSVILLE, became THOMAS-BOSVILLE BOSVILLE, of Ravenfield, Esq. 2 Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Alexander Emmerson, Esq. of Retford; and 2ndly, to the Rev. Stephen Ashton.

3 Bridget, m. to her cousin, Thomas Bosville, Esq.

ii. Alexander, who had an only dau., Elizabeth.

iii. Jasper, who d. unm. in Barbary.

iv. JOHN, of whom presently.

v. Anthony.

vi. Hugh, of the city of York, whose only dau. and heir,

Mary, m. Thomas Place, Esq.

The 4th son,

JOHN BOSVILLE, of London, m. Mary, dau. of Henry Robins, and had, with a dau., Mary, an only son,

THOMAS BOSVILLE, who became possessed of the estate of Ulverscroft Abbey, co. Leicester, by the will of his distant relation, Charles Bosville, Esq. of Hyanna, in Staffordshire. He m. his cousin, Bridget, 3rd dau. and co-heir of the Rev. Thomas Bosville, rector of Ufford, and dying in 1771, was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM-PARKIN BOSVILLE, Esq. of Ulverscroft Abbey and Ravenfield Hall, who d. without issue in 1811, and was s. by his brother,

THE REV. THOMAS BOSVILLE, of Ravenfield, who d. unm. in 1824, having made by will a settlement of his estates on the descendants of his eldest aunt, Margaret Bosville, wife of James Birch, Esq.: under that disposition, he was s. by his cousin,

THOMAS-JAMES BIRCH, of Thorpe Hall, lieut.-col. 1st life-guards, who assumed the surname of BOSVILLE, by sign-manual. He d. s. p. in 1829, and was s. by his cousin, THOMAS-BOSVILLE LEE, afterwards Bosville, of Ravenfield.

Lineage.—The Bowdons of Bowdon Hall, near Chapel-en-le-Frith, co. Derby, were settled there, according to many writers, upwards of four hundred years. Lysons mentions them as a very wealthy and ancient family. It is generally supposed that the Bowdons came over at the Conquest, as the name Bowdin or Bowdon appears on the roll of Battle Abbey. During the times of persecution carried on against the Catholics, most of the family papers were either lost or destroyed, and we are therefore compelled to begin only at the year 1500, when

GEORGE BOWDON, son of Thomas Bowdon, was of Bowdon. He m. Barbara, dau. of Nicholas Bagshawe, of Abney, and was father of Lineage.—The family of Bower was originally settled at Bridlington, East Riding of Yorkshire. In the earliest registers of its church we find the name of Bower, and it is continued in regular succession of entries from 1568 to the latter part of the last century, when the more immediate connexion of the family with that place appears to have ceased. The first advancer of the family was,

WILLIAM BOWER of Bridlington, merchant (son of John Bower, of the same place, and Jean [Bonfeyde], his wife), whose baptism occurs on the 14th May, 1598. He was a considerable benefactor to his native town. His eldest son,

JOHN BOWER, Esq. of Bridlington, m. in 1652, Catherine, widow of — Rogers, and dau. of William Bower, of Cloughton, and had several sons and daus.: of the latter, Priscilla m. 10 Aug. 1700, to Ralph Creyke, Esq. of Marton, near Bridlington; and of the former, the eldest,

BRACEBRIDGE OF ATHERSTONE HALL.

BRACEBRIDGE, CHARLES-HOLTE, Esq. of Atherton Hall, co. Warwick, J.P. and D.L., b. 19 March, 1799; m. 24 March, 1824, Selina, dau. of William Mills Esq. of Bisterne, co. Hanau.

Lineage.—This family establishes a Saxon descent, deriving from TURCHILL DE WARWICK, who enjoyed the dignity of Earl prior to the advent of the Normans, and afterwards, in conformity with the invaders, assumed the surname of ARDEN, from a woodland tract in Warwickshire.

OSBERT DE ARDEN, son of Turchill, by his 2nd wife, inherited the manor of Kingsbury, the principal seat of his father, which property passed eventually to his only dau.,

AMICIA DE ARDEN, wife of

PETER DE BRACEBRIDGE, so called from a place near Lincoln, of which he was lord. His elder son, JOHN DE BRACEBRIDGE, Lord of Kingsbury, d. issueless, 2nd HENRY III., and was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM DE BRACEBRIDGE, Lord of Kingsbury, constituted, 19th HENRY III., a justice of assize at Warwick. He was s. by his son,

SIR RALPH DE BRACEBRIDGE, Knt, Lord of Kingsbury, knighted in the 33rd of HENRY III. His dau., Matilda, m. Thomas de Clinton, and he was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN DE BRACEBRIDGE, Knt. From SIR JOHN we pass to

SIR RALPH DE BRACEBRIDGE, Knt., styled, in an inscription taken in the 1st of HENRY IV., "frater Johannis de Bracbrig militis." In the 7th HENRY V., Sir Ralph was summoned the first, amongst other persons of note, to attend the king in person, for the defence of the realm. Sir Ralph de Bracbrig, it appears, attended, in 1416, with eleven other knights of ancient family, HENRY V. to Paris, on the occasion of the coronation of CHARLES VI. of France. His descendant in the fifth degree was,

THOMAS BRACEBRIDGE, Esq. (a son of Simon Bracbrig, by Elizabeth, dau. of William Harewell, of Wotton-Waven). He m. twice, and disinherited the children * of his 1st wife, on marrying the 2nd, Jocosa Wilson. His son and heir, THOMAS, by that lady, becoming deeply involved in debt, the remainder of Kingsbury was alienated to Sir Francis Willoughby, Knt. of Middleton. He d. 1 March, in the 11th of ELIZABETH. The 3rd son of the 2nd marriage,

* The eldest son, William Bracbrig, m. Anne, dau. of Julian Nethermill; and d. 2 ELIZABETH, leaving a son, Michael, who d. s. p., and two daus., Margery, m. 1st, to Walsby Willington, of Hurley, Esq.; and 2ndly, to Barnaby Eate, Esq.; and Jane, m. to Lionel Skipwith, Esq.

BRADSHAIGH.

BRADSHAIGH, WILLIAM ROGER HARDEN, Esq. of Knappnagorran, co. Tipperary.

Lineage.—The manor of Bradshaw, near Bolton-le-Moors, co. Lancaster, has given name to a family which, whether we consider its extreme antiquity, its eminence, or the nobility of its descent, is equalled by but few of the equestrian order in the kingdom. The progenitor of this house at the time of the introduction of surnames, assumed the name of the estate where his ancestors were seated before the Norman Conquest; and, in accordance with the usage of the period, was styled "de Bradshaw." The pedigree begins with UHTRED, a great Saxon Thane, who held Salford, with several other manors of King EDWARD the Confessor, in capite, as appears from Domesday Book. The vellum pedigree of 1641, drawn out for the Derbyshire branch, sets forth that "the name of Bradshaw is now an ancient one in this country, but came in with the Saxons;" and it thus describes the first of the race "from whom all the Bradshaws in England are descended. He stood out against the Conquerours and bore arms against him, yet upon his submission to the said Duke of Normandy, being then King of England, it pleased the said Conquerours to restore him to life and living, judging him to be a man of a good wytt and a noble spryrite, and a bounk cowrage, not easily daunted, but bould and courageous, in the face of his enemies." From this distinguished patriarch derived the famous Houses of Bradshaw of Bradshaw, of Bradshaw of Marple (the family of the President Bradshaw), and of Bradshaigh of the Haigh, co. Lancaster.

JAMES BRADSHAIGH, Esq. of Haigh (son and heir of Roger Bradshaigh of Haigh) was father, by Jane, his wife, only dau. and heir of Thomas Hoghton, of Hoghton Tower, of

SIR ROGER BRADSHAIGH, lord of the manor of Haigh, who m. shortly before 1596, Anne, dau. of Christopher Anderton, Esq. of Lostock, co. Lancaster, and had a large family; the 7th son,

ROGER BRADSHAIGH, Esq. of Wigan, was b. between the years 1600 and 1612, served as a soldier of fortune in the Dutch and French services with much distinction; and is briefly mentioned in the Haigh pedigree as "Roger who followed the Wars." He m. 1640, Elizabeth, dau. of John Bradshaw, of Bradshaw, and had issue. The eldest son,

ROBERT BRADSHAW, who went to Ireland with his mother and brother in the year 1662, soon acquired a considerable landed interest in that part of the county of Limerick adjoining the village of Cullen, and in and about the village of Cappowhitte, co. Tipperary, which districts were long designated by the native Irish as "Bradshaigh's country." He d. in 1718, leaving by Catherine, his wife, five sons, viz.,

I. JOHN, his heir.

II. Robert, of Ballyvelode House, Kilnagoneen and Cullen, co. Limerick, b. 7 Dec. 1656, who left by Elizabeth, his wife, several sons. His representative is LETITIA BRADSHAW, sole heirress of the Ballyvelode branch, is a nun in St. Vincent De Paul's Convent, Dublin.

Lineage.—"The original name of this family," says Morant, "is supposed to have been Bamfield,"—a supposition borne out by the exact similarity of arms. The purchaser of Upminster Hall, in Essex, was

CAPT. ANDREW BRANFILL, Esq. of Dartmouth, in Devon, who bought the manor from the Earl of Gainsborough, in 1685. He m. in 1681, Damaris, eldest dau. of John Aylet, of Kelvedon Hatch, (son of the gallant Capt. Aylet, of Magdalen Laver, so distinguished in the cause of King CHARLES during the great civil war,) and by her had several children. He d. 27 July, 1709, aged 59. His eldest son and heir, CHAMPTION BRANFILL, Esq. of Upminster Hall, Essex, his sheriff in 1734, m. Mary, dau. of Mr. Benjamin Brand, of the city of London, and had issue. The elder son,

CHAMPTION BRANFILL, Esq. of Upminster Hall, m. Elizabeth James, and by her had two sons and a dau., viz., CHAMPTION; Benjamin; and Frances, d. young. The elder son and heir,

CHAMPTION BRANFILL, Esq. of Upminster Hall, m. 14 Oct. 1788, Charlotte, dau. of Edward Brydges, Esq., and Jemima his wife, youngest dau. and co-heir of William Egerton, LL.D., and by her (who m. 2ndly, 20 Jan. 1794, John Harrison, Esq.) had issue a son, CHAMPTION-EDWARD, and a dau. Jemima-Elizabeth, m. to the Rev. Thomas Harrison. Mr. Branfill d. 7 Oct. 1792, and was s. by his son,

CHAMPTION-EDWARD BRANFILL, Esq. of Upminster Hall, b. 13 July, 1789, who m. 26 Nov. 1818, Anne-Eliza, dau. of the Rev. Anthony-Egerton Hammond, lineally descended, maternally, from the Earls of Bridgewater. By this lady Mr. Branfill had issue, CHAMPTION, b. 10 Oct. 1820; succeeded to the estate of the late Joseph Russell, Esq., and assumed, in consequence the surname and arms of RUSSELL. Egerton-Anthony-Hammond, b. 28 March, 1825; d. 5 Oct. 1843.

BENJAMIN-AYLETT, of Upminster Hall. Chamption-Edward-Brydges, b. in 1829; d. in 1851. Brydges-Robinson, b. 22 Nov. 1833. John-Arthur-Capel, b. 22 March, 1838. Eliza-Jemima-Mary, m. 23 May, 1851, to the Rev. Edward-Francis Gepp. Charlotte-Jane. Agnes Josephia.

BRAY OF SHERE.

BRAY, EDWARD, Esq. of Shere, co. Surrey, J.P. and D.L., b. 20 July, 1793.

Lineage.—The name of the SIEUR DE BRAY occurs in the roll of Battle Abbey, amongst the associates in arms of the CONQUEROR.

SIR RICHARD BRAY, the descendant and representative of the Norman knight, is said by some to have been of the privy council to HENRY VI.; by others he is called the King's Physician; the former is the more probable, as he was buried in Worcester Cathedral. He had two wives; by the 1st, Margaret, dau. of John Sandes, Esq. of Furness Fell, in Lancashire, he had an only son, JOHN (Sir), whose only dau. and heir, Margaret, m. Sir William Sandys, Baron Sandys of the Vine; by the 2nd, Joan, Sir Richard had two other sons, viz., SIR REGINALD BRAY, knight-banneret and K.G., lord treasurer temp. Henry VII., and

JOHN BRAY, Esq., who was buried in the chancel of the church at Chelsea, had (with a dau., the wife of Sir John Norris) three sons, EDMUND (Sir), summoned to parliament as Baron Bray, 21st HENRY VIII., ancestor of the present BARONESS BRAY; EDWARD (Sir), of whom presently; and Reginald, of Barrington, co. Gloucester, ancestor of the BRAYS of Barrington. The 2nd son,

SIR EDWARD BRAY, Knt. of Vachery Park, in Cranley, Surrey, was sheriff of Surrey and Sussex in the 30th of HENRY VIII., and represented the former county in the two parliaments of Queen Mary. He died in 1558, and was s. by his son.

SIR EDWARD BRAY, Knt., M.P. for Helstone, in the 18th Elizabeth, who m. 1st, Mary, dau. of Simon Elrington, Esq. of Northampton, and had by her an only son, Reginald, described as heir-apparent, and of the Inner Temple in 1557, being then of age, who appears to have d. issueless. Sir Edward m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of William Roper, Esq. of Eitham, in Kent, by Margaret his wife, dau. of the Chancellor Sir Thomas More, and had another son, also named REGINALD. He m. 3rdly, Magdalene, dau. of Sir Thomas Cotton, of Kent, by whom, who d. in 1563, he had no issue; and 4thly, a lady, named Mary, by whom (who wedded 2ndly, Sir Edmund Tynley, master of the revels to Queen Elizabeth) he had three daus., Mary, m. to Sir George Chowne, Knt. of Wrotham, Kent; Magdalen, m. to George Bowes, Esq. of Durham; Frances, m. to George Gestrull, Esq. Sir Edward d. in 1581, and was s. by his son.

REGINALD BRAY, Esq. of Shere, bapt. 1 May, 1555, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Richard Covert, Esq. of Hascombe, in Surrey, and left a son and successor.

EDWARD BRAY, Esq. of Shere, b. in 1577. He m. 1st, Jane, dau. of Edward Covert, Esq. of Tuynham, in Sussex, and was grandfather of EDWARD BRAY, Esq. of Shere (son of Edward), bapt. 28 Oct. 1640, who m. Frances, dau. of Vincent Randyll, Esq. of Chilworth, and dying in 1714, was s. by his son.

EDWARD BRAY, Esq. of Shere, bapt. 4 Jan. 1687, who m. in 1727, Ann, dau. of the Rev. George Douncomb, rector of Shere, and dying in 1740, was s. by his eldest son.

THE REV. GEORGE BRAY, of Shere, who d. unm. 1 March, 1803, and was s. by his brother.

WILLIAM BRAY, Esq. of Shere, the learned antiquarian and historian of Surrey, bapt. 7 Nov. 1736. He m. Mary, dau. of Henry Stevens, gent., and had (with three daus., Mary, Catherine, and Amelia-Caroline, who d. unm. in 1789) a son.

EDWARD, b. 31 Jan. 1768; who m. Mary-Anne-Catherine, dau. of Daniel Malthus, Esq. of Albury, in Surrey, and master of the celebrated writer on population, and predeceasing his father in 1814, left issue,

1 EDWARD, now of Shere.

2 Reginald, b. in 1797; m. Frances, dau. of T.-N. Longman, Esq., and has a son, Reginald-More, and two daus., Mary and Henrietta-Louisa.

3 William, in holy orders.

iv. Cuthbert-Arthur, b. 17 Sept. 1850.

v. Elizabeth-Anna.

Lineage.—Ormerod, in his able History of Cheshire, mentions Grosvenor, Davenport, and Brereton as "three grantees who can be proved by ancient deeds to have existed at or near the Conquest, though unnoticed in Domesday." Of these, the family least favoured by fortune in later times (the peerage and the baronetcy in the Brereton family having both become extinct, and the heirship in lands and manors, in all the principal English lines, having descended to females) was, during the earlier centuries after the Conquest, among the most distinguished in the Palatinate; and by its fortunate and splendid marriages became entitled to prefer for its issue the highest claims, even to ducal and regal descent.

The Breretons appear to have arrived in England (from Normandy with WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, under Gilbert or Gislebert de Venables, surnamed Venator (the hunter), afterwards Baron of Kinderton, in the retinue of Hugh Lupus, or Hugh d'Avranches, nephew of the Conqueror, and afterwards Earl of Chester.

After the Conquest, the manor of Brereton (called Breton in Domesday) was one of the six dependencies of the Barony of Kinderton. Very shortly after this period, says Ormerod, "the manor of Brereton was granted to a family which assumed the local name, and was probably descended from the same stock as the Norman grantee of the Barony of Kinderton, if an opinion may be formed from the arms which the Breretons subsequently used, arg., two bars, sa., differing only in tincture from the coat which the Barons of Kinderton had adopted." And what seems a decisive test of consanguinity is, that upon any intermarriage of the Venables with the Breretons, a dispensation was required.

On these grounds it is inferred, that the first grantee of the manor of Brereton, who assumed the local name, was a Venable, or a youthful kinsman engaged in the Norman adventure. What we find as a fact is, that, in the reign of WILLIAM RUFUS, Ralf de Brereton witnessed a deed of Gilbert de Venables, and was probably his esquire.

The lineage of the direct line of the BRERETONS of Brereton Hall, and the Irish branch descended therefrom, is to be found in Ormerod's History of Chester, Lysons's Magna Britannia, Collins's Peerage, and Sir F. Dwarria's Memoirs of the Brereton Family.

From the branch seated at Shocklack and Malpas Hall, Cheshire, which separated from the elder branch of the family in the person of Sir Randolf Brereton, of Ipsstones, descend the BRERETONS of Norfolk.

JOHN BRERETON, Esq. m. Cicely, eldest dau. and co-heir of Robert and Mary Cook, of Brinton, and was father of three sons. The eldest,

BREWSTER OF WRENTHAM.

Lineage.—The Brewsters are one of the oldest of our East Anglian families: in the confirmation by Harvey, Clarenceux, A.D. 1561, of the original grant of arms (now in the possession of Cardinal Brewster, Esq. of Halstead, Essex), the house of Brewster is described as "most ancient;" the date of original grant is not known. In a list of the gentry of Norfolk, returned to King HENRY VII., A.D. 1433, we find the name of Galfridus Brewster, and in 1550, Sir John Brewster died at Kirton, in Lincolnshire. The family became connected with the county of Suffolk at a still earlier period, for in 1375, John Brewster was witness to a deed relating to land in the parish of Henstead. In the early part of the reign of EDWARD IV., the manor of Wrentham was purchased by this family; and in 1550, Humphrey Brewster, Esq., built Wrentham Hall, which was occupied by his descendants until 1797, when on the death of another Humphrey Brewster, the estate was sold and the mansion taken down.

In the county of Suffolk, this family possessed considerable influence; and in the great rebellion, became active partisans of the parliament. Colonel Humphrey Brewster raised and commanded a troop of horse against the king; and Robert Brewster, Esq. of Wrentham Hall, sat for Dunwich in the Long Parliament.

WILLIAM BREWSTER, Esq. of Rushmore, co. Suffolk, living temp. HENRY VI., m. Mary, dau. of William Hervey, Esq. of Olton, co. Suffolk, and was father of Robert Brewster, Esq. of Rushmore, who m. the dau. and co-heiress of Sir Christopher Edmonds, of Cressing Temple, co. Essex, and Lewknor co. Oxon; and had two sons, Humphrey and James. The former, Humphrey Brewster, Esq. of Wrentham Hall, co. Suffolk, who built that edifice, d. in 1526, m. Alice, dau. of William Foster, Esq. of Copdock, co. Suffolk, and d. in 1593, having had by her (who d. 1611), two sons and four daus., viz., FRANCIS, his heir; Humphrey, of Hadleigh, co. Suffolk, m. Grizel, dau. of Robert Rolf, Esq. of Hadleigh, and d. in 1613, aged 44; Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Thomas Brews, Esq., son of Sir J. Brews, of Wenham Hall, co. Suffolk, and 2ndly, to Francis Claxton, Esq. of Cheston, co. Suffolk; Susan, m. to John Hayward, Esq. of Gislehara, co. Suffolk; Mary; and Jane. The elder son and heir,

FRANCIS BREWSTER, Esq. of Wrentham Hall, b. in 1566, J.P. and D.L. for the co. of Suffolk, m. Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Snelling, Esq. of Ipswich, and d. in 1644, having had by this lady, who d. in 1638, ROBERT, his heir.

Francis, of Wrentham, b. in 1600; m. Susanna Bunnen; and d. in 1657, having had issue, Francis, b. in 1627, d. in 1694; John, of Yarmouth, b. in 1632; Robert, b. in 1638; Nathaniel, b. in 1643; Benjamin, b. in 1644; Elizabeth; Mary; and Anne.

Humphrey, of Hedenham, co. Norfolk, and afterwards of Beccles, co. Suffolk, b. in 1602; lieut.-col. of Infantry; d. in 1669; m. Ann, dau. of — Atkins, Esq. of Norwich, and had issue, Philip, of Wrentham Hall, who d. in 1710; Samuel, of Norwich; and John, of Beccles, who m. Rebecca Cleeves, and d. in 1718.

John, of Wyfields, Barking, co. Essex, b. in 1604; m. Mary, dau. of Augustine Scottowe, Esq. of Norwich; and d. in 1677, having had issue, Augustine, of Wyfields, b. in 1642, and d. in 1708, set 66; Samuel, of St. Margaret's, Westminster, who d. in 1701, leaving, by Dorothy his wife, a son, John, of the Cursitor's Office, and two daus., Dorothy and Mary.

Elizabeth, m. to the Rev. Richard Taylor.
Mary, m. to — Mildmay, Esq.

The eldest son and heir,

ROBERT BREWSTER, Esq. of Wrentham Hall, b. in 1599, M.P. for Dunwich in 1640-45-49-54-58-59, and 1660, and for the co. of Suffolk in 1656; m. Amy, dau. of Sir Thomas Corbet, of Sprowston, co. Norfolk, and had two sons, FRANCIS, and Robert. He d. in 1663, and was s. by his eldest son,

FRANCIS BREWSTER, Esq. of Wrentham Hall, b. in 1623, M.P. for the co. of Suffolk, who m. Cicely, dau. and co-heiress of Sir Charles Crofts, of Bardwell, co. Suffolk, and had two daus.,

AMY, m. Sir Philip Skippon, M.P. for Dunwich, son of Major-Gen. Skippon, the republican general; and Cicely, m. 1st, to Sir Robert Hatton, of Ditton, Surrey; and 2ndly, to Sir Harry Dutton Colt, Bart., M.P. for Westminster, temp. WILLIAM and ANNE. Mr. Francis Brewster d. in 1761, and was s. by his brother Robert, on whose decease in 1681, s.p., PHILIP BREWSTER, Esq., eldest son of Col. Humphrey Brewster, of Beccles, became the proprietor of Wrentham Hall; he d. in 1710, leaving a son and heir,

HUMPHREY BREWSTER, Esq. of Wrentham Hall, who m. Elizabeth Molton, and d. in 1735, aged 53, having had by her, who d. in 1747, PHILIP; William, b. 1718, d. 1738, s.p.; Humphrey, b. 1721, d. 1751, unn.; Anne, m. John Wilkinson, Esq. of Halesworth, co. Suffolk; Francis m. John Meadows, Esq. of Wotham, co. Suffolk; Mary; and Elizabeth. The eldest son,

PHILIP BREWSTER, Esq. of Wrentham Hall, b. in 1712, m. Isabella Crompton, of Doncaster, co. York, and d. in 1760, having had by her, who d. in 1773,

HUMPHREY BREWSTER, Esq. of Wrentham Hall, b. in 1752, d. 1797, unn. This family had many ramifications; one branch settled at Barking, in Essex, and possessed the manor of Withfield, in Great Ilford, and the manor of Conovera, in West Tilbury; another branch was established at Castle Hedingham, in Essex. There was also a branch of the family which, in the reign of ELIZABETH, owned land in Luddenham, Linstead, Lenham, Ospringe, and other parishes, in the county of Kent; another branch settled in Northamptonshire, in the reign of CHARLES I., where they possessed the manor of Welford, and other lands; and another branch, seated in Lincolnshire, gave birth to William Brewster, the ruling elder and chief pastor of the Pilgrim Fathers, who in 1620 went to America to avoid the religious persecutions to which they were exposed in this country, and became the founders of New England. In 1655, Nathaniel Brewster, of Aldby, in Norfolk, was appointed chaplain to Henry Cromwell, lord-lieutenant of Ireland, and was actively engaged in the service of the parliament; and in the same year, Hugh Brewster and Francis Brewster were acting as commissioners for securing the peace of the Commonwealth at Bury St. Edmunds; their correspondence with CHOMWELL and his secretary Thurloe may be seen in Thurloe's State Papers. In 1699, Sir Francis Brewster was appointed, in company with the Earl of Drogheda and others, a commissioner to take account of forfeited estates in Ireland.

There is also another branch of the Brewster family settled in Ireland, from which descends the Right Hon. ABRAHAM BREWSTER, son of William Bagnall Brewster, Esq. of Ballymulta, co. Wicklow, and grandson of William, the 2nd son of Samuel Brewster, of Ballywilliam Roe, co. Carlow.

The Hedingham branch of the Wrentham family settled at Castle Hedingham, Essex, early in the 16th century, and was allied to the ancient families of Clopton, Foley, Wentworth, Seckford, Hardwicke, Neville, Quarles, &c.

ROBERT BREWSTER, son of John, had four sons,

William, who d. 1583.

Robert.

Richard, d. 1593; buried in St. Dunstan's in the West, with Alice his wife.

BRODIE OF BRODIE.

BRODIE, WILLIAM, Esq. of Brodie, in Morayshire, Lieutenant of Nairnshire, b. 2 July, 1799; s. his grandfather Jan. 1824; m. 27 Nov. 1838, Elizabeth, 3rd dau. of Colonel Hugh Baillie, M.P., of Red Castle, and has issue,

- i. GEORGE-GORDON, R.N., b. 12 Aug. 1829.

- ii. Hugh-Fife-Ashley, roy. art., b. 8 Sept. 1840.

- iii. Cathiness, b. 25 Aug. 1842.

- iv. William-Douglas-Reynett, b. 20 Jan. 1845.

Lineage.—"This name (says Shaw, in his History of Moray) is manifestly local, taken from the lands of Brodie. In ancient writings, it is called Brothie, softened into Brodie. In the old Irish, broth signifies a ditch or mire, the same as dyke in Saxon, and digue in French. And the mire, trench, or ditch, that runneth from the village of Dyke, to the north of Brodie House, seemeth to have given this place the name of Brodie. Be this as it will, the antiquity of this appellation from this, that no history, record, or tradition, doth so much as hint that any other family or name possessed the lands of Brodie before them, or that they came as strangers from another country. I incline much to think, that they were originally of the ancient Moravians, and were one of those loyal tribes to whom MALCOLM IV. gave lands, about the year 1160, when he transplanted the Moray rebels." The old writings of the family were mostly carried away or destroyed, when Lord Lewis Gordon, afterwards (3rd) Marquis of Huntly, burnt Brodie House, in 1645. From

MALCOLM, Thane of Brodie, living temp. King ALEXANDER III., descended*

ALEXANDER BRODIE, of Brodie, styled Lord Brodie, as a senator of the College of Justice, b. 25 July, 1617, whose son and successor,

JAMES BRODIE, of Brodie, b. 15 Sept. 1637, m. in 1659, Lady Mary Ker, dau. of William, 3rd Earl of Lothian. The Laird of Brodie was fined £24,000, in 1685. He made his will 25 Sept. 1704, and d. in March, 1708, leaving his wife surviving. He had no son, but nine daus. He was s. by his cousin, GEORGE BRODIE (son of Joseph Brodie, of Aalisk, and grandson of David Brodie, of Brodie, brother of Lord Brodie. He m. 1692, Emilia, 5th dau. and co-heir of his predecessor, James Brodie, of Brodie, and d. before 6 Jan. 1716, leaving by her, who survived, three sons and two daus.

BRODIE OF LETHEN.

BRODIE, THOMAS-STEWART, Esq. of Lethen and Coulmony, co. Nairn, D.L., b. 22 April, 1837; m.

* From a younger branch of BRODIE of Brodie, derives the present SIR BENJAMIN-C. BRODIE, Bart.

1858, Emma-Georgina, 3rd dau. of William Gabbett, Esq. of Mount Minnith, co. Limerick, and has issue.

Lineage.—ALEXANDER BRODIE, 1st of Lethen, second son of David Brodie of that ilk, was b. about 1587, uncle of Lord Brodie; purchased, in 1630—1634, the estates of Pitgavenie, Eastgrange, and Lethen, in the cos. of Nairn and Moray, and in 1643, the estate of Kinloss, in the latter county. He d. 7 Nov. 1672, at a very advanced age, leaving issue by his 1st wife, Margaret Clerk (dau. of James Clerk, of Balbirnie, in Fife, and niece of Magdalen Clerk, wife of Edward, 1st Lord Bruce of Kinloss). His great-grandson,

ALEXANDER BRODIE, of Lethen, was M.P. for the county of Nairn in 1739. He m. in 1754, Henrietta, dau. of Colonel William Grant, of Ballindalloch and had issue five children, viz.,

ALEXANDER, his heir.

* Mr. Brooke, as the representative of the Grahams, formerly of Rahin, Queen's co., who were a branch of the Netherby family, is in possession of a massive old ring, worn by his lineal ancestor, Sir Richard Greme, and commemorative of an act of extraordinary chivalry; it is the knights' badge-ring, whereon is represented along with his initials—his sword—and his shield entwined with laurel—a victory crown, which last most rare distinction was conferred on him by Queen Elizabeth, together with his gold spurs and large estates, after the fight of Atherlow, A.D. 1600. Here it was that Capt. Richard Greme, commanding a band of sixty horse, attacked and "rowted" the whole forces of the Sigurs.

Catherine-A.D. Bradford, dau. of Rev. William Bradford, rector of Storrington, Sussex.

Lineage.—This family is said, on traditionary record, to have come from Cheshire early in the 17th century. One of them was a clergyman, holding a Government living during the troubles of 1641, and was driven from his house with the loss of his property by the insurgents. His wife's encounter with a rebel chief in a wood—so honourable to them both—has furnished a legend, and a christian name to the lady's female descendants.

The son of this clergyman was
WILLIAM BROOKE, who purchased Dromavana from the Sanderson family 1685. He had three sons,

1 WILLIAM, of Rantavan House, co. of Cavan, scholar of Trinity College, Dublin, 1691, rector of Killinkere, Mullagh, &c.; m. Lettice, 2nd dau. of Dr. Simon Digby, husband of Ephraim, and had issue, two sons,

ALEXANDER BROOKE, of Dromavana, m. July, 1713, Catherine, eldest dau. of Richard Young, Esq. of Drumgool, co. of Cavan, and had issue a son,

Earl of Desmond, consisting of 600 soldiers! In his third charge, Grange penetrated to their camp, seizing their cartridges, standards, &c.; but in his fourth assault, he charged so desperately that he "scattered their whole battalions," and that with such effect, that Stafford says, the Earl's horses were utterly broken, and he was brought to a "desperate fortune," and never again could rally to a head, "but got him into Ulster."—See Facula Hibernica, pp. 149, 150.

* On his return from India, with a true patriot's zeal, he spent some immense sum in building the village of Prosperous, and seeking to introduce the cotton manufacture into Ireland, and for this he received, in 1776, the thanks of both Houses of Parliament. However, in 1793, his countrymen, the rebels, burnt his town and his factories.

REV. WILLIAM BROOKE, of Dromavana, and of Firmount, co. BROWNE OF MOYNE.

BROWNE, MICHAEL-JOSEPH, Esq., late of Moyne, Galway, J.P., high-sheriff in 1847.

Lineage—This name Le Brun (afterwards Browne), stands 50th on the Battle Abbey Roll.

SIR DAVID LE BRUN or BROWNE, contemporary, and a companion in arms of the Red Earl of Ulster, with whom he was nearly connected by marriage, was a distinguished warrior, and obtained extensive possessions, particularly near Athenry, then the capital of the Anglo-Norman settlers in Connaught. His direct descendant,

WILLIAM BROWNE, m. Mary Athy, whose ancestor was one of the earliest Anglo-Normans that settled in Galway: it is stated that the Athys erected the first stone house in that ancient city, of which many of them filled the offices of sheriff and mayor.

JOHN BROWNE, eldest son of William, m. Honor de Burgo. He joined William de Burgo and others, who rose against the oppression of the English government, but fell with many other leaders of that party, at the battle of Knock-a-tuath, after which Athenry and Galway surrendered, when his son, STEPHEN BROWNE, who had m. Eveline, dau. of Geoffrey Lynch, mayor of Galway, 1487, s. to the property. He had, with a dau., six sons, Andrew, who d. while mayor of Galway, 1574; William; John; James; Patrick; and Nicholas, four of whom were admitted to the freedom of Galway in 1539-40, and came to reside on their properties in and about Galway.

WILLIAM BROWNE, of Galway, 2nd son of Stephen, m. Annastasia, dau. of Valentine Blake by his wife, Eveline French, dau. of Geoffrey French, by whom he had, Andrew, of Glones; Dominick, of Barna; Richard; and Thomas.

DOMINICK BROWNE, of Barna, served as mayor of Galway in 1575. He took a leading part in the affairs of Galway; and, with other chieftains, was a party to the composition which they entered into, in 1585, with Sir John Perrot, on the part of QUEEN ELIZABETH, for their properties in Connaught. He m. a dau. of Sir Morrough O'Flaherty, by whom he had (with a dau., Jane, m. to Alderman Patrick Kirwan, ancestor of the KIRWANS of Cragg) a numerous family of seven sons, from whom most of the present Galway families of Browne are descended. He d. at an advanced age in 1596, and was buried in the family tomb at the Franciscan Abbey, Galway. His sons were,

OLIVER, ancestor of the Coolarn line.

HOWARD, went to Germany: a son of his, Colonel Browne, in the service of the Duke of Lorraine, was to have commanded two thousand of the troops that prince proposed sending to aid CHARLES.

Geoffrey, father of Sir Dominick, ancestor to Lord Oranmore.

Marcus, ancestor of the BROWNES of Annaghmore, now extinct.

Thomas, from whom the families of Newtown, Ardsakea, and Cosloo, are descended.

James, had four sons, Peter FitzJames, sheriff of Galway, 1647; Thomas; Nicholas-FitzJames, who was father of Michael ancestor to the present John Francis Browne, of Tuam. These three were proprietors in and about Galway, while Patrick, the 4th son, joined his relatives in foreign service.

ANDREW, of whose descendants we treat.

ALDERMAN ANDREW BROWNE FITZDOMINICK, was the founder of the family of Cloonkeely and Moyne. He m. a sister to Sir Henry Lynch, of Carindulla and Castle-Carrig, co. Mayo; and had (with a dau., Mary, m. to Andrew Bodkin, of Annagh) three sons. Andrew was one of the independent jurors who found against claims of the crown, brought forward by Lord Wentworth. For this he suffered in common with his brother jurors, and was starved. Andrew d. in 1647, leaving his three sons then alive, viz.,

I. FRANCIS, who had been educated on the continent, and was then in foreign service, returned to Ireland: he commanded troops at the sieges of Limerick and Galway. On the surrender of the latter town in 1652, Francis left the country, to which he returned on the Restoration; but he, in 1661, assigned to his brothers the comparatively small portions of his inheritance which had been reserved, and rejoined his companions in arms on the continent.

II. DOMINICK m. his cousin Catherine, dau. of Sir Henry Lynch. He and his relative Geoffrey Browne, who m. Mary Lynch, sister to his wife, took an active part in the affairs of the confederate Catholics, particularly in defending their native town, Galway, which was the last of the towns in the United Kingdom that surrendered to the republican army. Dominick, as well as his brothers, got some grants on the Restoration, which he left to Edward, his only son, who entered the Spanish service, where he became a distinguished officer.

III. JOHN.

THE 2ND SON.

JOHN BROWNE, took an active part in opposing CROMWELL, for which he suffered during the Commonwealth; and on the restoration of CHARLES, he and his brothers recovered but a small portion of their inheritance. John m. in 1648, Angelina, dau. of Francis Athy, by whom he had two sons, Francis and Anthony. In 1664, John's eldest brother, Francis, whom we have mentioned before, determined on returning to foreign service; previous to which he settled most of his properties on his brothers, and appointed his younger brother, John, to manage the portion he reserved for himself in his absence. John d. while his sons were still young, leaving only his widow to protect their rights, in doing which she had many opponents to contend with. She succeeded in getting an additional grant. We find that Giles Athy, alias Browne, and Francis, her son, got a grant of Mullagh (the old name of Cloonkeely), 29 Feb. (22nd CHARLES II.), Francis being then a minor.

FRANCIS BROWNE joined the army of JAMES II., and is stated to have been killed in the wars, while defending Athlone, 1691. After his death, his mother went to reside with her only surviving son, Anthony, at Cloonkeely, hoping, by living in retirement, to escape further confiscation.

ANTHONY BROWNE, Esq., became the representative of this branch of the Brownes on the death of his elder brother, Francis; and heir to all that escaped confiscation of his father's grandfather's, and uncle's estates; but these were small in comparison to what was confiscated. Anthony m. in 1693, his cousin, Anastasia, dau. of Nicholas Browne, of Newtown, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN BROWNE, Esq. of Cloonkeely and Moyne. He m. Julia, dau. of Michael Lynch, of Tubberoe, by whom he had an only surviving son,

MICHAEL BROWNE, Esq. of Cloonkeely and Moyne, who m. in 1752, Mary, eldest dau. of Thomas Blake, Esq. of Malinbeg and Windfield, and had, with JOHN, his heir, Thomas, an officer in the East India service, killed while still young; and two sons, the elder, Julia, m. to Roderrick McDermott, Esq. of Coolavin; and the younger, Anne, to John Browne, of Castlemoyle, in the county Galway, Esq.

JOHN BROWNE, Esq. of Moyne, J.P., eldest son of Michael, m. in 1790, Margaret, dau. of John Dolphin, of Turco, by his wife, Eleanor Burke, of St. Clerans, dau. of John Burke, Esq. of St. Clerans, and had issue,

MICHAEL-JOSEPH BROWNE, Esq., late of M.-yne.

Dorothy, widow of Robert Bonham, Esq. and dau. and heiress of Gregory Basset, Esq. of Bradwell Hall, son of John Basset, Esq. of Bradwell Hall, Essex, by Catherine Andrews, his wife, niece of Sir John Hende, of Bradwell. At his marriage Anthony Maxey removed from Great Saling, and made Bradwell his residence. His issue were three sons; Anthony d. an infant; Sir HENRY and Sir WILLIAM; and three daughters; Jane, d. young; Dorothy, m. to Sir Edward Heron, one of the Barons of the Exchequer; and Bridget, m. to Edward Wentworth, of Bocking Hall, Esq. Anthony Maxey d. 12 Sept. 1592; his widow Dorothy, took to her third husband, John Babington, Esq., and, dying in 1602, was buried by the side of her second husband, Anthony Maxey, under a fair monument. The eldest surviving son,

HENRY MAXEY, Esq., b. 1567, succeeded to the estate. He was knighted 23 July, 1603, and served as High Sheriff 1607. He m. Mildred, dau. of William Cook, Esq., second son of Sir Anthony Cook, of Giddinghall, by Frances his wife, daughter of the Lord John Grey, brother to Henry Grey, Duke of Suffolk; but by her he had no issue. He d. 22 Oct., 1624, as did his wife the 8 Nov. following. His brother,

SIR WILLIAM MAXEY, Knt., then aged 50 years, succeeded him. He m. Helena, daughter of Sir Edward Greville, of Harold's Park, in Essex, Knt., by whom he had three sons and seven daughters: 1. Greville. 2. Henry, who was a great royalist, and served King Charles I. as Adjutant-General of his Horse. 3. William, a traveller, who served the King in all his wars against the rebels, and was Major-General of his Horse at the siege of Colchester; he died 25 January, 1659. Of the daughters, Elizabeth was the wife of Thos. Barker, of Sibton in Suffolk, Esq.; Dorothy, of Mr. Thwaites; Mildred, of Robert Carlo, of Herefordshire; Frances, of Mr. Wanford; Margaret of John Winter of Herefordshire; Elizabeth, first of Mr. Baker, secondly of Orlando Greene, Esq.; and Anne, who died unmarried. Sir William departed this life 24 July, 1645, aged 88. His wife surviving him, was married to Captain Spencer. She died 2 November, 1659, and was buried by Sir William, in the parish church, where stands a sumptuous monument, erected to their memory by Henry, their second son.

GREVILLE MAXEY, Esq., the eldest son, succeeded his father, and was Captain of the Trained Bands of Essex. He died 15 Feb. 1648. By his wife, Mildred, dau. of Sir William Cook, of Higham in Gloucestershire, Knt., he had Anthony; Henry; William, d. unm.; Greville, killed at Launby, in Germany; Thomas, died at Southampton; Edward, one of the King's Life Guards; Helena, wife of Thomas Eden, of Doreward's Hall, in Bocking, Esq. She remarried afterwards Richard Kirkeby, of Kirkeby Hall, in Lancashire, Esq.

ANTHONY MAXEY, Esq., the eldest son, m. Susan, dau. of Sir William Poley, of Boxted, Suffolk, Knt., but left no surviving issue. He sold the lordships of Saling Hall and Picots, in 1665, to Martin Carter, Esq., but he left Bradwell Hall to his brother, HENRY MAXEY, Esq., who, by his wife, Sarah, daughter of Humphrey Lowe, of Badow, had a son, ANTHONY MAXEY, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Martin Carter, of Saling Hall, Esq., and had by her, John, his only son, who died in 1727. Elizabeth, the mother, died in 1728. Upon her decease, the Bradwell estate, which had been settled upon Anthony Maxey and Elizabeth his wife, and the survivor of them, and the heirs of such survivor, descended to

MARTIN CARTER, of Witham, Esq., her nephew and heir, to whom she did, for greater security, devise the same by will. This Martin Carter was the eldest son of John Carter, Gent., of Baintree, who was brother to Martin Carter, Esq., the last owner of that name of Great Saling Hall. The said Martin Carter, of Witham, Esq., was one of the two Coroners for Essex many years before his decease, which happened 23 July, 1754. He was twice married; but dying without surviving issue, he left Bradwell Hall to his brother,

MILBOURNE CARTER, of Baintree, Esq., whose eldest son,

MARTIN CARTER, Esq., succeeded him; he d. 20 March, 1803, whereupon his widow Jane then had the estate for her life. She died 25 Feb. 1819, when

ANN BRUNWIN, eldest surviving child of Milbourne Carter, Esq. came in possession. She died 22 January 1853, and was succeeded by her son,

THE REV. MARTIN JOHN BRUNWIN, who m. 1812, Mary-Ann Tweed, of a Suffolk family, and dying 29 Nov. 1839, left issue,

BURKE OF BEACONSFIELD.

HAVILAND-BURKE, EDMUND, Esq. of Willstown, co. Louth, and of Lincoln's Inn, barrister-at-law, representative of the RIGHT HON. EDMUND BURKE, of Butler's Court, Beaconsfield, co. Bucks, b. 27 Jan. 1836; his father, Thomas-William-Aston Haviland-Burke, Esq., 8 April, 1852.

Lineage of Haviland.

According to M. Du Ruc, keeper of the Norman archives, and M. De Gerville, the distinguished Norman antiquary, "the family of Haviland originally Haviland derives its surname from an important Neustrian fortress, so called, situated on the river Saire near its mouth. At a very remote period the châtellenie of this castle, with its appendant fiefs, was held by the progenitor of this ancient race, who, in consequence, derive thence their name and arms. It is not improbable that the first Châtellen of Haviland was a scion of the powerful Vicomtes de Saint Saviour who were then, and long after, the governors of the county of Coutance. Of this honour the family held fiefs near Barneville at Golleville, and St. Colomba, all in the neighbourhood of Valognes."

The earliest mention of the Castle of Haverland is to be found in the Roman de Ros, a chronicle by Robert Wace, of the Island of Jersey, who wrote circa 1150, and of which the translation is as follows:—

"Hastins and Bier wasted all the surrounding country, robbed it, and then set fire to it: Revonnens, and Haverland, and the Castle of Gariland. The strong Castle of Haverland is situated at three-flights of an arrow above Saireport (i. e. Barfleur) in a country very full of beautiful woods and rivers."

When Duke William in 1066 successfully asserted his right to the English throne he was accompanied by all the Norman chivalry, and among them, according to the list of Breton, were the Sieur de Haverlain, and the Sieur de Gerville, or, as another historian gives the first name, the Sieur de Harevland. As the name, however, does not occur in Decomy's Book, it would seem that the Lord of Haverland was among the number of those who not being adventurers, after the performance of their devoir to their duke, returned, much to his disgust, to the peaceful enjoyment of their Norman properties.

The names of the Lords of Haverland are to be found in existing charters and other authentic documents down to the Sieur Thomas de Haverland, of Guernsey still living a.d. 1479, from whom the modern connected pedigree commences. We, therefore, pass to this

THOMAS DE HAVILLAND, who in company with Sir Richard Harleston, at that time commanding the channel fleet, went to Jersey and took the Castle of Mont-Orgueil from the French in 1467. A commercial patent was given him by EDWARD IV in reward, which conferred the privilege for six years of importing into the port of Poole, duty-free, goods, the total amount of which should be £2,000 (such goods being the property of the patentee). His 2nd son, James, to carry that patent out, settled at Poole, in England, and became the ancestor of the English branch of the family, (see post HAVILLAND, of Dutton Hall.) Thomas de Haviland m. and d. about 1480, leaving issue three sons,

i. THOMAS, the ancestor of the Guernsey line (see post, DE HAVILLAND, of Haviland Hall.)

ii. JAMES, of whom presently.

iii. Andrew, who m. and had a son, James, at whose death a. p., his line became extinct.

The 2nd son,

JAMES DE HAVELLAND, b. in Guernsey about 1440, settled in 1471, at Poole, and he with his wife lie buried in Poole Church, in the Havelland aisle, in a chantry founded by themselves: a gothic inscription over the arches of the aisle still records the fact. He m. Helene, dau. of Richard de Beaufort, Esq. of Guernsey, and d. 1502, leaving issue,

i. Richard, who m. Eleanor, dau. of William Cheek, Esq. of Great Causton, Dorsetshire, and left three daus. only, viz. Isora; Alice; and Cecilia.

ii. JAMES, of whom presently.

iii. John, ancestor of the HAVILLANDS of Wilswood House, in the Isle of Purbeck, who are now extinct.

iv. William, a staunch Roman Catholic at the time of the Reformation, whose only son, Matthew, was Rector of St. James's, in Poole, and was deprived of that living in consequence of his sermons savouring too strongly of the doctrines of the Church of Rome. This Matthew d. a. p.

i. Eleanor, m. to William Pitt, from which marriage have descended four titled branches, viz. the Earls of Chatham; the Earls of Londonderry; the Barons Camelford, all now extinct; and the existing Barons Rivers.

The 2nd son,

JAMES HAVELLAND, Esq. m. Julia —, and d. 1515, leaving as only child and successor,

1524

CHRISTOPHER HAVELLAND, Esq., who m. 16 Sept. 1544, Cecilia, dau. of John Main, Esq. of Poole, and d. 24 June, 1589, leaving issue,

i. MATTHEW. ii. James.

iii. Nathaniel.

i. Margaret, b. 1555; m. to Sir Peter Buck, Knt. of Rochester, Kent.

ii. Eleanor, b. 1560; m. to William Hilley, of Upton Manor, co. Dorset, from whom descend the Viscounts Sidmouth.

The eldest son,

MATTHEW HAVILLAND, Esq., his father's successor, was b. at Poole, 15 June, 1550. He settled at Bristol, of which city he became mayor in 1607. He was a staunch supporter of the protestant cause, and contributed largely towards the equipment of the fleet sent against the Spanish Armada. He was possessed of the manor of Hawkesbury, co. Gloucester, and of Charlinch, and various other manors in the co. Somerset. He m. 9 May, 1575, Mary, dau. of Robert Kytchin, Esq. of Bristol; and d. 11 March, 1619, leaving,

i. Robert, of Hawkesbury (so registered in the visitation of Gloucestershire, 1623), m. Elizabeth, dau. of John Guise, Esq. of Elmore, co. Gloucester (ancestor of the Guises, baronets), and had an only son, Matthew, of Hawkesbury, b. 1608, at whose death, a. p., in 1670, this branch became extinct.

ii. Matthew, who d. a. p. 1624.

iii. JOHN.

iv. William, who m. and had an only son, Bartholomew, who d. a. p. i. Anne, m. to Sampson Lortie, Esq. of Bristol.

ii. Mary, m. 30 Aug. 1607, to Richard Holworthlie, Esq. mayor of Bristol, 1635.

The 3rd son,

JOHN HAVILLAND, Esq. of Charlinch Hall, co. Somerset, b. 20 Aug. 1579, inherited from his father the Somersetshire estates. He m. 13 May, 1623, Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Everard, Esq. of Spaxton Court, co. Somerset; and d. 10 Aug. 1663, leaving issue two sons,

i. JOHN.

ii. Matthew, of Gundenham Manor, co. Somerset, who, by Elizabeth his wife, had two sons, i. JOHN, ancestor of the HAVILLANDS of Dutton Hall, co. Cambridge (see post); and 2 Matthew, of Welshford House, co. Somerset, whose branch ended in Mary, an heiress, m. to William Webber, Esq. of the Inner Temple, barrister-at-law, who conveyed the Welshford estate to the family of Gardiner, its present possessors.

The elder son,

JOHN HAVILLAND, Esq. of Charlinch Hall (so mentioned at the visitation by Bysshe, of co. Somerset 1672) b. 1632; m. Elizabeth, dau. of Alexander Dight, Esq. of West Buckland, co. Somerset, and left (with a younger son, Matthew, who d. unm. in the East Indies) an elder son and successor, JOHN HAVILLAND, Esq., M.D. of Hart Hall, Oxon, who, b. 1653, was appointed to take charge of the Royal Naval and Military Hospitals at Plymouth, and in consequence settled and resided there to the time of his death. By his 1st wife, Anne Payne, (who d. 8 Nov. 1683) he had an only son, John, D.D. of Exeter College, Oxon, Vicar of Petherwin and Trewin, co. Cornwall, who d. unm. 11 April, 1702. Mr. John Haviland m. 2ndly, 22 May, 1685, Lucretia, dau. of Peter Tollar, Esq. of Fowey, co. Cornwall, by whom (who d. 24 May, 1752) he left at his death, 18 July, 1711, an only son and heir,

PETER HAVILLAND, Esq., a captain in the army, who was b. 1691, and m. Lucy —, by whom he left at his death, 7 Feb. 1775, a son and two daus., viz.,

ii. WILLIAM. i. Mary, m. William Dodge, Esq. of Devon.

vi. Letitia, d. unm.

The only son,

WILLIAM HAVILLAND, b. 1717, a general in the army, and a distinguished officer, who more than once received public recognition of his services. He entered the army in 1739 and made his first campaign under General Wentworth at the siege of Carthage in 1740, and was, during that expedition in the West Indies. From that time he was in continual active military employment. He was aide-de-camp to General Blakeney during the rising of 1745 in Scotland. On the breaking out of the French war in 1756, Haviland acted as a lieutenant in America. He was at the reduction of the Havannah and the taking of Martinique where he was second in command. He was at the head, in Canada, of a detached force of 10,000 men in co-operation with Lord Amherst and General Murray in the subjugation of that province. General Haviland was a man of great mechanical genius, and was of much service in enabling the army to overcome the natural difficulties of the Canadian territory. He, on one occasion in particular, constructed a novel kind of pontoon bridge for passing the rapids. In 1762 he was raised to the rank of major-general, in 1772 to that of lieutenant-general, and in 1783 to that of general. In 1779 he was appointed to the important command of the western district during the whole time the French invasion was expected. The general resided at Penn, Bucks, within three miles of Butler's Court, the seat of the Rt. Hon. EDMUND BURKE, with whom he was on terms of close intimacy, which ended in a family connection by marriage, as will be seen below. The general m. 1st, 5 July, 1748, Caroline, dau. of Colonel Francis and Lady Elizabeth Lee,* and granddau. of Sir Henry Lee, 1st Earl of Lichfield, by whom (who d. in Ireland, 1751) he had no issue. Gen. Haviland m. 2ndly, Salisbury, 2nd dau. of Thomas Aston, Esq. of Beaulieu, co. Louth, grandson of Henry, Lord Ferrard, of Ferrard, in that county, and by her (who d. 30 Oct. 1807) had issue,

1. THOMAS, of whom presently.

1. Mary, b. 1756; m. Oct. 1785, Samuel-Ruxton Fitzherbert, Esq. of Swinnerton, co. Meath; and d. s. p.

The general's only son,

THOMAS HAVILAND, Esq. of Penn, followed his father's profession of arms and attained the rank of colonel. He m. 3 June, 1792, Mary-Cecilia, dau. of Patrick French, Esq. of the FRENCHS of Rasan, co. Galway, by his wife, Julia, only sister of the Right Hon. EDMUND BURKE, of Butler's Court, and d. 1795, leaving by her (who d. 5 Mar. 1816) an only child,

THOMAS-WILLIAM-ASTON HAVILAND, barrister-at-law, b. 10 Aug. 1795, who upon the death of his mother, in 1816, having become sole blood relation and representative of his illustrious great-uncle, the Right Hon. EDMUND BURKE, obtained the royal licence to take the name of Burke in addition to and after that of Haviland, and to bear the arms of Burke quarterly with those of Haviland. Mr. Haviland-Burke m. in 1827, Harriet-Elizabeth, 3rd dau. of the late William Minshull, Esq. of the MINSHULLS of Adon Clinton, Bucks, an ancient family ennobled by CHARLES I and still having estates in that county, and by her had issue,

1. EDMUND, his heir.

1. Mary-Juliana, m. to Edward-D'Arcy Eveyard, Esq., an officer in the East Indian army.

II. Caroline-Frances.

Mr. Haviland-Burke was called to the bar by the Hon. Society of Lincoln's Inn in 1823. He, however, did not closely follow the practice of his profession, but devoted the greater portion of his life to objects of public benevolence and utility, and to the cultivation of the fine arts. He d. 3 April, 1852, and was s. by his only son, the present EDMUND HAVILAND-BURKE, Esq.

Lineage of Burke.

This family of Burke which was brought into public note by its illustrious member Edmund Burke, and which claims kindred with the parent stem of De Burgh—a claim admitted by John-Smythe Burke or De Burgh, 11th Earl of Clanricarde—held at different periods property in the counties of Galway and Limerick, but in the troublous times of the 16th and 17th centuries these estates shared the fate of those of many ancient Irish houses whom confiscations have almost extinguished. The representative of the family in the latter part of the 17th century, RICHARD BURKE, Esq., was seated at Cloher, near Castletown Roche, co. Cork. His son and successor, RICHARD BURKE, Esq., m. 1725, Mary, dau. of Patrick Nagle, Esq. of Ballyduff and Moneminy, descendant of Sir Richard Nagle, attorney-general for Ireland, temp. JAMES II, whose family is connected with the poet, Edmund Spenser, from the poet's eldest son, Sylvanus Spencer, of Killoolman, co. Cork, marrying Ellen, dau. of David Nagle, Esq. of Moneminy. Richard Burke by his marriage had issue,

1. Garret, d. m. in 1765.

II. EDMUND.

III. Richard, d. m. 4 Feb. 1794.

1. JULIA, bapt. 1728; m. 5 Jan. 1766, PATRICK FRENCH, Esq. of the FRENCHS of Rasan, co. Galway; and d. 1790, having had issue,

MARY-CECILIA, b. 1766; who m. in 1792, COLONEL HAVILAND, of Penn, in Buckinghamshire; and d. 5 March, 1816, leaving an only child, T. W. A. HAVILAND-BURKE, Esq., father of the present EDMUND HAVILAND-BURKE, Esq. (See ante lineage of HAVILAND.)

The second son,

EDMUND, the orator and statesman, one of the greatest men of any time or age, was born at his father's house, 33, Arran Quay, Dublin, 1 Jan. 1730, and received his early

* This Caroline's elder sister, Elizabeth, was the 1st wife of the Hon. Henry Temple, grandfather of the present Viscount Palmerston. Her mother, Lady Elizabeth Lee, m. 2ndly, 27 May, 1731, Dr. Edward Young, of Wellwyn, Herts, author of "The Night Thoughts." She d. 29 Jan. 1739, and it is reported that the melancholy feelings caused by her death led the doctor to compose that celebrated poem. His correspondence, of a most affectionate character, with his step-daughter, Mrs. Haviland is in the possession of the present Mr. Haviland-Burke.

education at Castletown Roche, and at Abraham Shackleton's school at Ballitore, in the co. Kildare. He afterwards went to Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated B.A. in 1748, and M.A. in 1751. He entered the Hon. Society of the Middle Temple 23 April, 1747, but was never called to the bar. The subsequent public career of Edmund Burke, his eloquence, his statesmanship, his political wisdom and wonderful foresight, are matters of history, and are now subjects of universal knowledge. Of his public, and equally admirable private life, it is unnecessary here to treat beyond mentioning that his parliamentary career lasted from 1765 to 1794, and he, as member, successively for Wendover, Malton, Bristol, and again for Malton, took part in all the great measures that formed the subject of debate during that period. He was secretary of Lord Rockingham, in 1765. He was made a privy councillor and paymaster of the forces in 1782; he was again paymaster of the forces in 1783; but his principal fame as a statesman was achieved in opposition. His two most celebrated works, "The Essay on the Sublime and Beautiful" and his "Reflections on the Revolution in France," were published, the one in 1756, and the other in 1790. His other numerous and justly appreciated writings appeared in rapid succession during the whole course of his life. His elevation to the peerage, as LORD BURKE, of Beaconsfield, was contemplated on his retirement from the House of Commons, but the death of his only son induced him to decline the proffered honor.

In 1768 Mr. Burke purchased the seat of Butler's Court, near Beaconsfield, for about £25,000. Of this sum a considerable part remained on mortgage, the remainder being obtained partly from money raised on his own family inheritance in Ireland, and partly through the generosity of Lord Rockingham, who advanced the balance. He m. 1757, Mary-Jane, only dau. of Christopher Nugent, Esq., M. D., and by her (who d. 1812) had (with a younger son, Christopher, who d. an infant) a son, Richard, M. P. for Malton, who d. m. 2 Aug. 1794, and whose death caused such grief to his father as to hasten his demise. Edmund Burke d. at Beaconsfield, 9 July, 1797, and was interred in a vault in the church there, pursuant to his own testamentary wish, which prevented his being buried in Westminster Abbey. Burke, by his will, left all his property, both real and personal, to his wife, except a legacy of £1,000 to his niece, Mrs. Haviland.

Mrs. Burke, after her husband's demise, continued to dwell at Butler's Court up to the period of her death, which took place 2 April, 1812. With Mrs. Burke, there also resided at Butler's Court, Edmund Burke's niece, Mrs. Haviland, and her son. Mrs. Haviland from her childhood had lived under the hospitable roof of her uncle, whose adopted child she in fact was. Her son, Thomas, afterwards Mr. Haviland-Burke, was not only brought up from his infancy in the family mansion at Beaconsfield, but as the last male representative of EDMUND BURKE was spoken of by Mrs. Burke, and looked on naturally by his mother, as heir to the estate. This, however, was not to be so, for it turned out that the estate was privately sold by Mrs. Burke to Mr. Du Pre, of Wilton Park, for £38,500 with the reversion of a life interest in the house, grounds, and a portion of land. Mrs. Burke, who d. possessed of a very handsome fortune, left a will, dated 1811, by which, with the exception to Mrs. Haviland of a legacy of £3,000, she bequeathed the whole of her own and her husband's property to her brother, Mr. John Nugent, and his sons and daus.* At Mrs. Burke's death the beautiful collection at Butler's Court of works of art and many costly objects, the gifts of great personages, including some from the sovereigns of Europe, were dispersed under this will. The mansion itself at Butler's Court did not long survive. It was, in 1813, let to a Mr. Jones, and he had hardly taken possession when it was accidentally burnt to the ground. It has never been rebuilt, and but few vestiges of the celebrated house remain to mark its actual locality.

- i. Harriet-Gertrude, d. young.
- ii. Elizabeth-Constance.
- iii. Alice-Mary-Caroline.

Lineage.—The first mention we have of the family of Steade, living at, or being possessed of Onesacre, in the co. of York, where stands the old family mansion, appears, according to Dr. Hunter, in some old writings of the time of EDWARD III., between 1326 and 1377.

JOHN DE LA STEDE resided, as we find from several ancient deeds, at Onesacre, in 1417, as did his immediate successors, Thomas, John, John, and Nicholas de la Stede.

THOMAS STEADE, Esq., b. in 1723. (7th in descent from Nicholas Stende), m. in 1768, Molliscent, dau. of Strelley Pegge, Esq. of Beauchieff Abbey, and sister of the late Peter Pegge, of Winkburn Hall, who devised his estates to his nephew, the late Mr. Pegge-Burnell. By her he had issue,

- THOMAS his successor, who d. unm. 1706.
 BROUGHTON-BENJAMIN.

Mr. Stende d. in 1793. His 2nd son,

BROUGHTON-BENJAMIN STEADE, Esq. b. 3 July, 1774, J.P. and D.L., high-sheriff of Derbyshire in 1839, succeeded in Feb. 1836, to the estates in the counties of Nottingham and Derby, of his maternal uncle Peter Pegge-Burnell, Esq. of Winkburn, Notts, and then took by royal authority the names of PEGGE and BURNELL, instead of that of Steade, in compliance with an injunction contained in his uncle's will.

PETER PEGGE-BURNELL was 3rd and youngest son of Strelley Pegge, of Beauchieff Abbey, Derbyshire, to whose estates he succeeded, as also to those of his distant relative, D'Arcy Burnell, of Winkburn, Notts, in 1784. On his marriage with Mary, relict of J. Lee, Esq. of Chesterfield, he also became the possessor of considerable property in that neighbourhood. On the death of Mary, relict of D'Arcy Burnell, in 1784, the said Peter Pegge took the name of BURNELL in addition.

The Burnell family has been settled at Winkburn since the time of King EDWARD VI., when the monastery of Winkburn, together with the parish, formerly belonging to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, was granted to John Burnell, merchant, of London, in exchange for certain lands in Sussex. (See THOROTON'S Nottinghamshire.)

The Pegges were settled at Ashbourne, in Derbyshire, when Edward Pegge m. Gertrude, only dau. and heiress of Nicholas Strelley, of Beauchieff Abbey. By this marriage the Strelley estates, at Beauchieff, passed into the Pegge family.

Mr. Broughton-Benjamin Pegge Burnell, married 21 Dec. 1802; and d. 20 May, 1850, leaving a dau., Mary-Millicent, m. 22 March, 1831, to the Rev. Wm. Smith, of Dunston Hall, Derbyshire, and a son and successor, the present EDWARD-VALENTINE PEGGE-BURNELL, Esq. of Winkburn Hall and Beauchieff Abbey.

I. Constance-Lingen.

Lineage.—The BURTONS of Longner have been seated for many centuries in Shropshire. One antiquary, viz., William Burton, B.L., in his Commentary on Antonine's Itinerary, says, "they were of Shropshire, a family for some time, for no ordinary relations, very gracious with the several princes of the royal house of York," and another (Browne Willis, Esq., M.P. of Whaddon, Bucks,) tells us that "they were a family of great antiquity, being possessors of Longner in the time of EDWARD IV. and before that being seated at Burton, or Boerton, in the parish of Conover, Shropshire."

SIR EDWARD BURTON, of Longner, representative of the family, "was with King EDWARD IV. successful in fourteen set battles, between the houses of York and Lancaster; and for his great royalty (loyalty?) and service he was made knight-banneret, under the royal standard in the field," A.D. 1460. In 1558, on the accession of Queen ELIZABETH, Edward Burton, of Longner, died of joy, and his body being refused interment at St. Chad's, Shrewsbury, was brought back and buried in Mr. Burton's own garden, a Longner, where his tomb is still carefully preserved. His direct male representative,

THOMAS BURTON, Esq. of Longner, son and heir of Robert Burton, Esq. of Longner, high-sheriff of the co. Salop, in 1709, was b. in 1705, and d. at Shrewsbury in 1730. His nephew (the son of his sister Anne, by her husband, Thomas Lingen, Esq. of Sutton Court, co. Hereford, and Radbrook, co. Gloucester), was

ROBERT LINGEN, b. in 1725, who assumed the name of BURTON, pursuant to the will of his great-uncle, Thomas Burton, by act of parliament, 1748. He m. 7 June, 1748, Anne, dau. of Thomas Hill, Esq. of Tern Hall, by whom (who d. in 1771) he had issue,

CAMERON OF LOCHIEL.

CAMERON, DONALD, Esq. of Lochiel, co. Inverness, b. 5 April, 1835; s. his father 4 Jan. 1859.

Lineage.—The surname of Cameron is of great antiquity in Scotland, and in ancient times was variously written, viz., Cameron, Cambron, Cambrun. "The Camerons have a tradition among them that they are originally descended of a younger son of the royal family of Denmark, who assisted at the restoration of King FERDINAND II., anno 404; but it is more probable that they are of the aborigines of the ancient Scots or Caledonians that first planted the country."

"The earliest possession of the Camerons"—we quote Ekene's Highlanders of Scotland—"was that part of Lochaber extending to the east of the loch and river of Lochy, and was held by them of the Lord of the Isles; their more modern possessions of Lochiel and Locharkaig, which lay on the west side of that water, had been granted by the Lord of the Isles to the founder of the clan Hamald, by whose descendants it was inhabited. Originally the clan Cameron consisted of three septa, the clan Ie Mhartin or MacMartins of Letterfinlay; the clan Ie Iionobhy, or Camerons of Strone; and Sileoch Shoirie Ruaidh, or Camerons of Glenelva."

"The Camerons having, along with the clan Chattan, deserted Alexander, Lord of the Isles, when attacked by JAMES I in Lochaber, and having subsequently refused to join Donald Balloch in his invasion of Scotland in 1431, that chief, after his victory at Innerlochy, resolved to revenge himself upon the Camerons, and attacked them with fury. The clan was unable to withstand his attack, and the chief was obliged to fly into Ireland, while the rest of the clan took refuge amongst the most inaccessible parts of the mountain country." When the return of Alexander from captivity had restored some degree of order to his wild dominions,

DONALD DHU, the then chief of the clan, appears to have raised the Camerons from the depressed state into which they had fallen by the vengeance of the Lords of the Isles, and to have re-acquired for the clan the estates which they had formerly possessed. From Donald Dhu we pass to his descendant,

SIR EWEN CAMERON, of Lochiel, b. In Feb. 1629, who eclipsed in fame all his predecessors, and from a very early age became a staunch adherent of the royal cause. Sir Ewen, or "Evandhu" as he was called in the Highlands, was the first to join the insurrection of 1652 in favour of the king, and the last who held out against Cromwell. He fought at Killieranky, although then an old man, and survived to the year 1719. He m. thrice. By his 2nd wife, a dau. of Sir Lachlan Maclean, of Dowart, he left a son and successor,

JOHN CAMERON, of Lochiel, called John MacEwen, who served with the Earl of Mar in 1715, and suffered attainder and forfeiture. He m. Isabel, sister of Sir Duncan Campbell, of Lochneil, and had issue, DONALD, his heir; John of Fassifern, co. Argyll, father of Sir Ewen Cameron, of Fassifern, who was created a baronet in 1817; and Archibald, a physician, who engaged in the rebellion of 1745, and was executed; by Jean, his wife, dau. of Archibald Cameron, of Dungallon, Dr. Cameron left issue, four sons and a dau. John Cameron d. at Nieuport, in Flanders, in 1748, and was s. by his eldest son,

DONALD CAMERON, of Lochiel, captain of the clan Cameron, who had joined CHARLES EDWARD with a considerable body of his men in 1745, and fought at their head on several occasions. After the battle of Culloden, he retired to France, and there got the command of the regiment of Albany. He m. Anne, dau. of Sir James Campbell, 6th Bart. of Auchinbreck, by whom he left at his death, in 1748, an eldest son and heir,

JOHN CAMERON, Esq. of Lochiel, capt. in the regt. of Albany, who d. 1762, and was s. by his only surviving brother,

CHARLES CAMERON, Esq. of Lochiel, who was allowed to return, and who lent his influence to the raising of the Lochiel men for the service of Government. He m. Miss Marshall, and was father of

DONALD CAMERON, Esq. of Lochiel (who was restored to the estates under the general act of amnesty of 1784) m. in 1795, Anne, dau. of Sir Ralph Abercromby, and sister of the late Lord Abercromby, by whom he had issue,

CANNING OF FOXCOTE.

CANNING, ELIZA-MINTO, of Foxcote, co. Warwick, elder dau. and co-heir of the late Major John Camning of the Bengal Native Infantry; s. to the Foxcote estate at the decease of her uncle, Robert Canning, Esq. of Foxcote; m. 16 Nov. 1843, PHILIP-HENRY HOWARD, Esq. of Corby, co. Cumberland, and has issue,

- i. PHILIP-JOHN-CANNING, b. 14 March, 1853.
- ii. Mary-Frances.
- iii. Margaret-Jane.
- iv. Agnes-Julia.

Lineage.—The name of Canning is derived from the manor of Bishop's Cannings, in Wiltshire, where the family was originally seated, and where the senior line continued until it terminated in co-heiresses, in the time of HENRY VII. A younger son settled in Bristol in the reign of EDWARD II., and the branch founded by him formed the most eminent family of that city during the greater part of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. William Cannings represented Bristol in several successive parliaments, and was six times mayor between 1360 and 1390. He d. in 1394, leaving, with other issue, John Cannings, his son and heir, who was member for Bristol, and also, in 1392 and 1394, mayor. He d. in 1406, leaving three sons and three daus. all then under age. Thomas, his second son, was lord mayor of London in 1456; William, his third son, was the celebrated mayor of Bristol of the reign of EDWARD IV., and the re-founder of the church of St. Mary Redcliffe, in that city. He d. in 1476, being then in holy orders, and Dean of the Priory of Westbury, which he had previously founded.

JOHN CANNINGES, the eldest son of John, was the father of THOMAS CANNINGES, who acquired the estate of Foxcote, by his marriage with Agnes, the eldest dau. and co-heir of John Salmons, and Eustasia, his wife, dau. and heir of John in Marshall, in whose family Foxcote had been vested from the time of the Conquest. Richard Canning of Foxcote, the son and heir of Thomas and Agnes, was the grandfather of

RICHARD CANNING, Esq. of Foxcote, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Richard Petty, Esq. of Ilmington, and had, with several other children, RICHARD, his heir; and GEORGE, ancestor of EARL CANNING, of LORD GARVAUGH, and of VISCOUNT STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE. Richard Canninge was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD CANNING, Esq. of Foxcote, who m. 1st, Mary, dau. of William Sambache, of Broadway, in the co. of Worcester, and 2ndly, Jane, dau. of Edward Porter, of Aston, in the co. of Gloucester. He had, by his first wife, two sons and two daus. The elder son,

WILLIAM CANNING, Esq. of Foxcote, m. 1st, Anne, dau. and heir of Thomas Haywoode, of Bradford, and 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Edward Porter, of Acton, in the co. of Gloucester, and sister of Sir Endymion Porter. By the former he left a son and heir,

RICHARD CANNING, Esq. of Foxcote, who m. Grace, dau. of Edward Fowler, Esq. of St. Thomas, in the co. of Stafford, and was father of

RICHARD CANNING, Esq. of Foxcote, living temp. CHARLES II., who m. Jane, dau. of Charles Busby, brother of Sir John Busby, Knt. of Addington, Bucks, in 1683, and was s. by his son,

FRANCIS CANNING, Esq. of Foxcote, living in 1720, who m. Apollonia, dau. and at length sole heir of Robert Barker, Esq. of Montewecke, co. Essex (by his wife, Catherine, dau. and eventually sole heir of Sir Henry Audley, Knt. of Beurburgh), and had issue, FRANCIS, his heir; Richard; and Anne, wife of — Greenward, Esq. of Bruers Norton. The son and heir,

FRANCIS CANNING, Esq. of Foxcote, m. Mary, dau. and eventually sole heir of John Petre, Esq. of Filders, Essex, fourth in descent from John, fourth son of William, second Lord Petre of Writtle, and had (with other sons, who d. s. p.) FRANCIS, his heir; Thomas, whose son Edward m. Louisa, dau. of William Spencer, Esq.; Ann, Superior of the English Augustin Nuns, at Paris; and Mary, m. to Joseph Blount, Esq. of Chaldgrave. Mr. Canning's eldest son and heir,

FRANCIS CANNING, Esq. of Foxcote, m. Catherine, dau. of Peter Giffard, Esq. of Chillington, by Helen, his third wife, dau. of Robert Roberts, Esq. of Plas-Ucha, and had issue,

- i. FRANCIS, his heir.
- ii. ROBERT, successor to his brother.
- iii. John, major in the Native Bengal Infantry, d. 1 Sept. 1854, leaving by Mary-Anne, his wife, dau. of Sir John Randall Meredith, Bart. of Newtown, co. Meath, two daus., namely,

- i. ELIZA-MINTO, of Foxcote, m. to PHILIP-HENRY HOWARD, Esq. of Corby Castle.

2 Julia-Matilda, m. 18 Aug. 1841, to J. Fleming, Esq., Q.C.

Mr. Canning was s. at his decease by his eldest son, FRANCIS CANNING, Esq. of Foxcote, an early and earnest advocate of Parliamentary Reform. He m. Jane, dau. of Ferdinand Huddleston, Esq. of Sawston, co. Cambridge, but dying s. p. in 1831, was s. by his brother, ROBERT CANNING, Esq. of Foxcote, b. 1773, J.P. and D.L., high-sheriff of Gloucestershire, 1832; m. 1st, Catherine, dau. of John Berkeley, Esq. of Spetchley, by Jane, his second wife, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Compton, Bart., but by her (who d. Feb. 1823) he had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Maria, 2nd dau. and co-heir of the Rev. Joseph-Bonnor Chertton, of Longford House, co. Gloucester, and by her left two daus., his co-heiresses, viz. MARIA and FRANCES-CATHERINE, the elder of whom m. 30 Nov. 1848, Patrick-Robert Gordon, Esq., late capt. 75th highlanders (2nd surviving son of the late William Gordon, Esq. of Milrig, co. CARY OF TORR ABBEY.

CARY, ROBERT-SHEDDEN-SULTARDE, Esq. of Torr Abbey, co. Devon, b. 22 June, 1828.

Lineage.—The ancient family of CARY derives its surname from the manor of Cary, or Karl, as it is called in Domesday Book, lying in the parish of St Giles-in-the-Heath, near Launceston. In the year 1198,

ADAM DE KARRY was lord of Castle Karry, in the co. of Somerset. His descendant,

SIR ROBERT CARY, Knt.,* m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Philip Courtenay, of Powderham, in Devonshire; and 2ndly, Jane, dau. of Sir William Hanchford, Knt., and widow of Wadham. A proof of the great prowess in arms of this gallant knight is recorded in the following exploit:—"In the beginning of the reign of HENRY V., a certain knight-errant of Arragon, having passed through divers countries, and performed many feats of arms, to high commendation, arrived here in England, where he challenged any man of his rank and quality to make trial of his valor and skill in arms. This challenge Sir Robert Cary accepted, between whom a cruel encounter and a long and doubtful combat was waged in Smithfield, London. But at length this noble champion vanquished the presumptuous Arragonois, for which King HENRY V. restored unto him good part of his father's lands, which, for his loyalty to King RICHARD II, he had been deprived of by King HENRY IV, and authorised him to bear the arms of the knight of Arragon, viz., 'In a field, silver, on a bend, sa., three white roses,' which the noble posterity of this gentleman continue to wear unto this day: for, according to the laws of heraldry, whosoever fairly in the field conquers his adversary, may justify the bearing of his arms." Sir Robert was s. at his decease by his son by his 1st marriage, with Elizabeth Courtenay,

SIR PHILIP CARY, Knt. of Cockington, co. Devon, who m. Christian, dau. and heir of William Orchard, of Orchard, in Somersetshire, by whom (who m. 2ndly, Walter Portman) he had a son and successor,

SIR WILLIAM CARY, Knt., who fell in the battle of Tewkesbury, anno 1471, fighting under the banner of Lancaster. He had m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William Paulet, of Hinton St. George, co. Somerset, and had a son, ROBERT, his heir. His 2nd wife was Alice, dau. of Sir Baldwin Fulford, of Fulford, co. Devon, Knt., and by her he was father of THOMAS, of Chilton Foliot, who m. Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir Robert Spencer, Knt., by Alianore, dau. and co-heir of Edmond Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, and had two sons, Sir JOHN CARY, ancestor of the Viscounts Falkland; and WILLIAM CARY, who m. Mary, sister of ANNE BOLEYNE, the unhappy consort of HENRY VIII., and had by her (who m. 2ndly, Sir William Stafford, Knt.) a son, HENRY CARY, created by his cousin, Queen ELIZABETH, Baron Hunsdon.* Sir William Cary was s. by his elder son,

* Sir Robert's brother was Bishop of Exeter.

ROBERT CARY, Esq. of Cockington, who m. 1st, Jane, dau. of Sir Nicholas Carew, Knt., and had two sons, JOHN, who m. Jane, dau. and heir of Edmund Derick, Esq. of Oakhampton, and had issue; and THOMAS, of Cockington, Robert Cary m. 2ndly, Agnes, dau. of Sir William Hody, Knt. of Pillwood, co. Dorset, and had a son, William. He m. 3rdly, Margaret, dau. and heir of William Fulkeram, Esq. of Dartmouth, and had another son, Robert, upon whom he conferred Clovelly, in the north of Devon. The 2nd son of Robert Cary,

3 Thomas, of Moushall, co. Stafford, m. Martha, dau. of William Steward, of Rowley, in the same shire, and d. in 1644. He was father of John Cary, of Ditchley, in Oxfordshire, who m. Jane, dau. of Richard Nantant, of the co. Gloucester, and, dying in 1644, left several sons.

Edward Cary, of Moushall.

4 Edward, d. s. p.

5 GEORGE, who inherited Cockington, and the remainder of his uncle the lord-deputy's estates; m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Edward Seymour, Bart. of Berry Pomeroy, co. Devon, and had (with three younger sons and a dau.), Sir HENRY CARY, Knt. This gentleman was sheriff of the co. of Devon in the 18th of CHARLES I., and during the civil wars devoted himself and his fortune to the services of that unhappy prince. Having thus consumed a considerable estate, when the royal cause fell he was forced to fly his native land. The house of Stuart was not, however, unmindful of such disinterested devotion, for when the Duke of Ormonde, in a succeeding reign, appeared off Torbay, he assured the family, on the part of his royal master, the CHEVALIER, of that prince's recognition of their great services, and of his wish to grant them high honours and honourable indemnification, in pledge of which he had sent them his father King JAMES II.'s picture, with that of his mother, the Queen, inclosed in a silver box. This memorial is now preserved at Follaton.

6 Dudley, m. and had issue.

Thomas Cary was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

Lineage.—This family is of considerable antiquity in Wales and the neighbouring county of Hereford.

Sir THOMAS CASWALL, a knight of the Holy Wars, was buried at Leominster. Long subsequently Sir George Caswall, who had very great estates in that neighbourhood, and represented Leominster in several parliaments, was implicated with Mr. Aislabie, chancellor of the exchequer, and others, in the South Sea Scheme; was fined to an enormous amount, and committed to the Tower, till, by the sale of his Herefordshire estates, he paid the charge imposed upon him—being upwards of a quarter of a million sterling. He left two sons, John and Timothy. John, the eldest, left one son, John, father of THE REV. ROBERT-CLARKE CASWALL, who m. Elizabeth-Clarke Pryor, (the sole representative in direct descent of the ancient family of Clarke, of whom Sir John Clarke, Banneret, in Stricken field, took prisoner, temp. HENRY VIII., Louis d'Orléans, Duke de Longueville, and was rewarded by a grant of arms: a gold thumb-ring, given by the king, bearing the fleur-de-lis of France, is still in possession of the family), and one dau., Henrietta, m. to William Halhed, Esq., a director of the Bank of England. Timothy, the younger son of Sir George, left a son, George Caswall, of Smeane Park, Herts, who d. leaving no male issue.

The old family estates were at Presteign, Eye, Kimbolton, Eynshaw, Berrington, Leominster, and other places in Herefordshire. Those of late date are at Burford and Alcott, Oxfordshire, and Murly Manor, Hants.

CATHCART OF CARBISTON.

The late TAYLOR CATHCART, Esq. of Carbiston, co. Ayr, and of Pitcairnie, co. Fife, m. in 1823, Frances, eldest dau. of George Marcy, of Geneva and Kepp, in Jamaica, and had issue,

- i. JAMES.
- ii. Robert.
- iii. William-Taylor, Lieut. R.A., d. 17 Jan. 1859.
- iv. Frances.

Lineage.—The CATHCARTS of Carbiston, says Nisbet, are an "old branch of the family of Cathcart, as far back as the time of ROBERT III.;" but it would appear that a still greater antiquity can be claimed for them. They had a gift of the wardship of the lands of Carbiston, during the reign of DAVID II., in 1368.

JAMES CATHCART, of Carbiston, son of Francis, of Carbiston, and the lineal descendant of David Cathcart, of Duchray, 3rd son of John, Lord Cathcart, m. Magdalen, eldest dau. of Sir James Rothead, Bart. of Inverleith, by whom he had, COL. JAMES CATHCART, and Capt. Thomas Cathcart, the latter of whom was killed in the Spanish wars. He was s. by his son,

COL. JAMES CATHCART, who, on his succession, became Col. James Rothead-Cathcart, of Inverleith and Carbiston. He d. unm., and was s. by his grand-nephew,

JAMES CATHCART, of Carbiston, who m. in 1764, Lucretia, eldest dau. of Robert Colquhoun, of St. Christopher's and Santa Cruz; and dying in 1795, was s. by his son,

JAMES CATHCART, major in the 19th dragoons, many years on active service in India. He d. unm. in 1810, and was s. by his brother,

ROBERT CATHCART, capt. in the royal navy, an officer of distinguished merit. In the memorable battle of the Nile, he served as fifth lieutenant in the "Bellerophon," and his captain having been wounded early in the action, and the four senior lieutenants killed, he had the glory of continuing the contest with the "L'Orient," till the latter blew up. In 1813, while in the "Alexandria," 32 guns, he gave chase for eighty hours (H.M. sloop "Spitfire," 18 guns, in company) to the American ship "President," 50 guns, Capt. Rogers—the latter only escaping by superiority of sailing. Capt. Cathcart m. in 1814, Catherine-Scrymgeour, dau. of Henry-Scrymgeour Wedderburn, of Wedderburn and Birkhill. He d. in 1833, leaving no issue, and was s. by his brother, the late TAYLOR CATHCART, Esq. of Carbiston and Pitcairnie, many years resident in Jamaica.

Arms—Az., three cross crosslets, fitché, issuing out of as many crescents, arg., two and one; and in the collar point a man's head ensigned with an imperial crown, ppr., as a maternal difference from other descendants of the family of CATHCART.

Crest—A hand issuing out of a wreath, holding up a crescent, arg.

Motto—I hope to speed.

Seat—Pitcairnie, Fife-shire.

CATHCART OF KNOCKDOLIAN.

CATHCART, ALEXANDER, Esq. of Knockdolian Castle, co. Ayr, b. 6 March, 1800; s. his brother in 1840; m. 13 July, 1841, Margaret, 4th dau. of James Murdoch, Esq.

Lineage.—JAMES CATHCART, of Barnell, 2nd son of John Cathcart, of Carleton, and grandson of Robert Cathcart, of Killochan, obtained a charter of the lands of Easter Barnell M'Laune from King JAMES, in 1601, and purchased the estate of Genoch, co. Wigton, about 1618. His grandson,

JOHN CATHCART, of Genoch and Knockdolian (son of Robert Cathcart, of Genoch, and grandson of John Cathcart, of Genoch, by Rosina his wife, dau. of Sir Peter Agnew, of Lochmaw), m. 9 June, 1719, Agnes, eldest dau. of Alexander Cochrane, of Craigmuir, nephew of the 1st Earl of Dundonald; and d. in 1779, leaving an only son,

ROBERT CATHCART, of Genoch and Knockdolian, b. in 1721; who m. 12 May, 1763, Marion, only dau. of John

Buchan, of Letham, co. Haddington, by his wife, Elizabeth Hepburn, of Smeaton, and by her (who d. 10 Aug. 1810, aged 70), had issue, JOHN, his heir; Robert, of Drum, d. 18 Nov. 1812, leaving a son, Robert, d. was. 20 May, 1834, and seven daus. Mr. Cathcart d. in 1784, and was s. by his eldest son, III. Maria-Eliza, m. 2 Dec. 1831, to Richard-Henry Kinchant, Esq. of Park Hall, Shropshire, J.P., D.L., and high-sheriff, in 1846, formerly an officer in 60th regt.

* His granddaughter and sole heir, m. to Francis Theophilus, Earl of Huntingdon.

† Nephew of Gen. Sir Patrick Grant, K.C.B. Commander-in-Chief, Madras.

Lineage.—The family of Caton, or as sometimes found in old records varied in the following forms, de Caton, Catton, Catun, and Katon, stated to be of Saxon origin, came originally from the co. Norfolk, and the name is presumed to be derived from the manor of Catton, near Norwich, in Domesday book spelt Catun. The earliest record of the name in the co. appears 5th HENRY III, 1201, when RICHARD DE CATUN, was seized of lands in Strame-shaw. In 1243, Isaac de Caton was high-bailiff or chief magistrate of Norwich; and we find Robert de Caton, Henry de Caton, and John de Caton, holding the like offices in succession to the year 1265.

In 1273, Sylvester Catun, held lands in the manor of Walsingham, and also in the hundred of North Greenhow, Norfolk: in 1298, Robert Catun, burgess, was returned for Orford, parliament at York, 25 May, 26th EDWARD I; and in 1306, Robert Caton, sen., burgess, was also returned for Orford. In 1320, John de Caton, held in free warren, Breideston, Berlingham, and Tofte, in Norfolk, 4th HENRY IV. The celebrated articles of the Percys, the Earl of Douglas, and others, were sent and submitted to the King by Thomas Caton and Thomas Salvain, both of whom are stated to have been esquires to King HENRY.

In 1420, Sir John Caton was rector of St. John's church, Norwich.

John Caton, was buried in the north aisle of St. Margaret's church, Catton, by Norwich, circa 1448; and also another John Caton, and Margaret, his wife, in 1458. A stone in the said aisle, bore the following inscription: "Orate pro animabus, Johs. Katon, sen., et Margarete uxoris ej."

Many other instances of the name in the co. of Norfolk, might be adduced.

The present family derive immediately from THOMAS CATON, seized of lands at Wendling, Norfolk, and at Denham, Suffolk; the former property was purchased, 2nd EDWARD VI, 1548; he left issue, by Elizabeth, his wife,

I. THOMAS, of Brumstead, co. Norfolk.

II. HENRY, of Denham, aforesaid.

CHALMERS OF ALDBAR CASTLE.

CHALMERS, JOHN-INGLIS, Esq. of Aldbar Castle, Forfarshire, s. his brother in 1854.

Lineage.—As to the origin of the Chalmers in the north of Scotland, it is most probable that they are a branch of the Clan Cameron, from the affinity of their arms; and besides, Sir George Mackenzie, in his genealogical manuscript of the families of Scotland, says, "One of the clan going to France, put his name in a Latin dress, by designing himself Camerario, which, in French, is 'de la chambre,' who, upon his return to Scotland, was, according to our dialect, called Chambers, which tradition (continues Sir George) is more confirmed by the fleur-de-lis carried in base in their arms, which addition their predecessor has no doubt got when in France for some meritorious action done there."

Derived from a branch of CHAMBERS of Balnacraig, was WILLIAM CHALMERS, Esq. of Aldbar, son of — Chalmers, of Aldbar, Esq. by his wife, the eldest dau. of — Forbes, of Foveran, Bart. He m. Cecilia, dau. of Elphinstone of Glack, Aberdeenshire, and had (with a dau., who m. Irvine of Inverardray) a son,

CHAMBERLAYNE OF MAUGERSBURY.

CHAMBERLAYNE, JOSEPH-CHAMBERLAYNE, Esq. of Maugersbury House, co. Gloucester, b. 19 Dec. 1791; m. 26 Oct. 1824, Henrietta-Catherine, dau. of the Rev. Guy Fairfax (of the family of Lord Fairfax), and granddau. of the Rev. John Kearney, D.D., by his wife, Henrietta, dau. of the Hon. and Rev. Henry Brydges, brother of James, Duke of Chandos, and has had issue,

- i. Henrietta-Catherine-Elizabeth, deceased.
- ii. Lavinia-Frances-Elizabeth.
- iii. Theophania-Caroline-Elizabeth, deceased.
- iv. Blanche-Frances-Elizabeth.

Mr. Chamberlayne, lately an officer in the royal artillery, assumed, in compliance with his maternal uncle's will, the surname of CHAMBERLAYNE only, in lieu of his patronymic, Ackerley.

Lineage.—This family is descended from John, Count de Tankerville, of Tankerville Castle, in Normandy, who accompanied the CONQUEROR to England; and, on the subjugation of that country, returned to his extensive landed possessions in Normandy. This ancient family of the Tankervilles was nearly allied to the Montmorency branch of the royal house of France. JOHN, son of the Earl of Tankerville, being left in England, became lord-chamberlain to HENRY I., and was father of RICHARD, lord-chamberlain to King STEPHEN, who assumed the surname of CHAMBERLAYNE from his office, the sign-manual having been given as its warranty. He was father of WILLIAM CHAMBERLAYNE, Lord of North Ryston, chamberlain to HENRY II., who, having made prisoner Robert de Bellemont, Earl of Leicester, had permission, in 1174, from the king to quarter that nobleman's arms with his own. His grandson, Sir RICHARD CHAMBERLAYNE, m. JANE, dau. and heir of John Gatenaden, and was grandfather of SIR JOHN CHAMBERLAYNE, distinguished in the martial reign of EDWARD III., who m. Jane, dau. and heir of John Mortein, son and heir of Sir John Mortein, by Joan his wife, dau. and heir of Richard Ekney, of Ekney, and was father of SIR RICHARD CHAMBERLAYNE, who m. Jane, dau. of Sir John Reynes, of Clifton Reynes, Knt., and had issue. The eldest son, SIR RICHARD, settled at Sherborn, co. Oxford, where his descendants continued until the time of JAMES I., when John, the last male of the branch, d., leaving two daus. and co-heirs: the elder m. 1st, to Sir Thomas Gage, Bart., and 2ndly, to Sir William Goring, Bart.; and the younger, m. to Nevill, Lord Abergavenny. Sir Richard's younger son, JOHN CHAMBERLAYNE, Esq. of Hopton, co. Derby, was father of THOMAS, whose son, JOHN, m. a dau. of — Elton, and was s. by his son, JOHN, father, by Agnes Keynes his wife, of WILLIAM CHAMBERLAYNE, Esq., who m. Elizabeth Fleming, of Dartmouth, and had two sons; from the younger, WILLIAM, descended the CHAMBERLAYNES of Wickham, Barons, extinct in 1776. The elder son,

SIR THOMAS CHAMBERLAYNE, of Prestbury, co. Gloucester, ambassador to the court of Spain in the reigns of HENRY VIII., EDWARD VI., QUEENS MARY and ELIZABETH, m. thrice: 1st, Ann Van der Zenny, of the royal house of Nassau; 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Luddington, and relict of — Machine, and from this marriage derive the Maugersbury branch; and 3rdly, Anne Kirkcote, half-sister to Anthony Monk, of Devonshire, granddau. to the Duke of Albemarle, from whom descended the CHAMBERLAYNES of Oldington.

EDMUND CHAMBERLAYNE, Esq. of Maugersbury, co. Gloucester, 2nd son of Sir Thomas Chamberlayne, by his 2nd wife, became heir to his brother, Sir John, of Prestbury, who had m. CHAPMAN OF WHITBY STRAND.

CHAPMAN, THOMAS, Esq. of Whitby, co. York, J.P., D.L., F.R.S., and F.S.A., b. 21 June, 1798; m. 24 March, 1825, Maria-Louisa, youngest dau. of John Hanson, Esq. of The Rookery, Woodford, and of Great Bromley Hall, co. Essex, high-sheriff in 1796, and has an only dau., ETHEL-MARIA.

Lineage.—"The Chapman family," says Young, in his History of Whitby, "resided at Whitby, and in Ybourn Dale, prior to the year 1400, as appears from the registers and rolls of Whitby Abbey. The late Sir Thomas Chapman, of Ireland, and Admiral Chapman, of Sweden, belonged to the family." "This family (we quote an old family M.S.) was settled at or near Whitby, in the time of HENRY III., as appears by ancient records; and in the time of RICHARD II. some of them were prosecuted and imprisoned by the Abbot of Whitby, for maintaining their just rights and privileges, but were soon set at liberty by the abbot, without paying any fees. They increased much in a century or two, and many of them were in the parliamentary army."

ROGER CHAPMAN and JOHN CHAPMAN were of Ybourn, near Whitby, York, in 1381, from one of whom descended,

ABEL CHAPMAN, of Whitby, b. 22 Oct. 1694 (4th son of William Chapman and Mary, his wife, dau. and heir of William Temple, Esq., grandson of Sir William Temple, provost of Trinity College, Dublin); m. 1st, 25 Jan. 1720-1, Susannah, dau. of George Lotherington Esq., by whom he had two daus., Elizabeth and Mary, both d. s. p. Lineage.—The name of Charlton is probably derived from that of the village, near Woolwich, in Kent.

JOHN DE CHARLTON, was possessor of the manor of Hillington, in Middlesex, which with the manors of Cowley, Perivale, Oldfold, Ickenham, Swakely, Rookwood, and others, were inherited by his son and grandson of the same name, and continued with his descendants until

SIR RICHARD CHARLTON, son of Sir Thomas Charlton, of Hillingdon and Edmonton, suffered an attainder, in 1486, for adherence to RICHARD III., at the battle of Bosworth, by which all his estates were forfeited.

In 1774, THOMAS DE CHARLTON, son of John de Charlton, quitted all claim in the manor of Woolwich, to Nicholas Lavigne.

His son, SIR THOMAS CHARLTON, acquired the manor of Edmonton by marriage with the dau. and eventual heir of Sir Adam Francis, which Sir Thomas Charlton, the younger, his son, inherited in right of his mother, and was father of Sir Richard above-named, after whose attainder they ceased to be landowners in Middlesex.

CHESTER OF BUSH HALL.

CHESTER, CHARLES, Esq., H.E.I.C.S., present representative of the CHESTERS of Cokenhatch, b. 19 Aug. 1803; m. Margaret Faithfull.

Lineage.—The CHESTERS enjoyed, at a very remote period, large possessions in Derbyshire, and represented the town of Derby in parliament temp. EDWARD II. and EDWARD III. Their Derbyshire estates* were, however, expended in supporting the claim of the Earl of Richmond (HENRY VII.) to the crown.

SIR ROBERT CHESTER,† only son of the Lancastrian, one of the gentlemen of the privy chamber to KING HENRY VIII., obtained from that monarch a grant, by charter, of the monastery of Royston, with the lands and manors thereunto belonging, in the counties of Hertford and Cambridge. Sir Robert, who was knighted at Wilton by EDWARD VI. in 1552, m. Katherine, dau. of Christopher Throckmorton, Esq. of Coorse Court, Gloucestershire, and had (with other issue, whence the CHESTERS of Gloucestershire) a son and successor,

EDWARD CHESTER, Esq. of Royston, who m. Katherine, dau. and heir of Sir James Granado, Knt., equerry to HENRY VIII., and had (with a dau., Mary, m. to Edward Throckmorton, Esq. of Chaddesden, Bucks) a son and successor,

SIR ROBERT CHESTER, of Royston and Cokenhatch, who, entertaining KING JAMES I. in the king's progress from Scotland, received the honour of knighthood, 1603. He m. Anne, dau. of Sir Arthur Capel, Knt. of Haddam Hall, by Mary his wife, dau. of John, Lord Grey of Fargoe, and had, EDWARD, his heir; Granado, and Robert, both doctors in divinity; John, b. in 1607; Henry, a colonel in the army; Katherine, m. to Sir Thomas Nightingale, Bart.; Anne, m. in 1671, to Edward Radcliffe, Esq. of Hitchin; Theodosia, a 1st, to Robert Nightingale, Esq. of Newport, and 2ndly, to Sir Francis Theobald, Knt.; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Henton, D.C.L., of Lichfield; and Frances, m. to George Popt, Esq. of Abingdon. Sir Robert was s. by his eldest son,

SIR EDWARD CHESTER, of Royston and Cokenhatch, who was knighted in 1642. He m. 1st, Katherine, dau. of John Stone, Esq. of Bradford Grange, Herts, sergeant-at-law, and had, John, who predeceased his father, leaving issue, whose descendants alienated the Royston property; Anne, a 1st, to Robert Eade, M.D., and 2ndly, to Henry Hoogan, M.D.; and Cecilia, m. to Thomas Turner, Esq. of Walden. Sir Edward m. 2ndly, Anne, dau. and heir of Sir Peter Hallowell, Knt. of Barkway, co. Herts; and dying in 1664, left by her a son,

EDWARD CHESTER, Esq. of Barkway and Cokenhatch, sheriff of Herts in 1666, who m. Judith, dau. and heir of Edward Wright, Esq. of Finley, in Nottinghamshire, and had (with four daus.) two sons, viz. Robert, who alienated all the remaining estates: he m. twice, and left several children by his 2nd wife; and Peter, of whom presently. Edward Chester, of Barkway, d. 21 May, 1718. His younger son,

THE REV. PETER CHESTER, D.D., rector of Heydon, in Essex, bapt. at Barkway, 10 July, 1678; m. Sarah, 2nd dau. of Richard Webb, Esq. of Cavenham, in Suffolk, and left at his decease, in 1728, with other issue, a son, ROBERT CHESTER, Esq. of the Middle Temple, who m. Harriot, dau. and co-heir of Charles-Adelmare Caesar, Esq.; and had issue,

* When the family left Derbyshire, a branch settled in London, and another at Bristol, but both have long since become extinct. A family of Chester, deriving from a common ancestor with the Hertfordshire house, seated itself at Chicheley, co. Buckingham, but expired in the male line in 1755, the estates passing by a female heir to the family of Bagot (see CHESTER of Chicheley).

† From an uncle of this Sir Robert, a younger brother of his father, descended the CHESTERS of Leicestershire.

‡ Literally descended from Peter-Maria Adelmare, of Treviso, and his wife, Paola, dau. and co-heir of John de Paolo Casarino. Their grandson, SIR JULIUS CESAR, was Master of the Rolls in 1610; he m. twice, and was direct ancestor of Charles-Adelmare Caesar, Esq. who m. Jane, only child and heir of Henry Long, of Bayford Place, Herts, and left at his decease (in battle, being an officer of cavalry) two daus., viz.,

ROBERT (Sir), his heir.

Charles, b. 31 Dec. 1768, in holy orders, chaplain to the Earl of Hardwicke, m. Catherine, dau. of the Rev. John Roberts, archdeacon of Merioneth, and has issue.

Harry, b. 10 Aug. 1770, of the Coldstream guards, a major-general in the army, m. Harriot, youngest dau. of Gen. Sir Henry Clinton, K.B., and d. 26 June, 1821, leaving issue. Jane.

Lineage.—The family of BALDWIN, which eventually assumed the name of CHILDE, through an heiress, is stated, from strong presumptive testimony, by Blakewell, in his Sheriffs of Shropshire, to derive from BAWDEWYN, a Norman on the Roll of Battle Abbey; and it appears that the Baldwins at a very remote period were seated at Diddlebury, more recently Delbury, in Coverdale, Salop. The lineal male descendant of this ancient house,

SIR SAMUEL BALDWIN, b. in 1618 (son of Charles Baldwin, Esq., M.P., a steady royalist, and nephew of Thomas Bawdewin, of Diddlebury, who suffered imprisonment in the Tower of London, temp. ELIZABETH), was a barrister-at-law, and one of the King's serjeants in 1672. He d. in 1683, and was buried in the Temple Church, being styled on his monument, "of Stoke Castle." Sir Samuel's eldest surviving son,

CHARLES BALDWIN, Esq. of Elsieh and Stoke Castle, m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Nicholas Acton, Esq., by Mary his wife, sister and co-heir of Edwin Skrymaher, Esq. of Aqualate, and was grandfather of

CHARLES BALDWIN, Esq. of Aqualate, M.P. for Shropshire (grandson of Charles Baldwin, Esq., by Elizabeth Allgood his wife). He m. Catherine, elder dau. and co-heiress of William-Lacon Child, Esq. of Kinlet, by Catherine his wife, dau. of Samuel Pytts, Esq. of Kyre, and had, with a dau., Catherine, two sons, Charles (the younger), who d. in 1811, and the elder, his successor,

WILLIAM BALDWIN, Esq., who assumed the surname and arms of CHILDE only. He m. 20 Nov. 1776, Annabella, 2nd dau. of Sir Charlton Leighton, Bart., and by her, who d. 21 Jan. 1816, had

CHISHOLM.

THE CHISHOLM. The late Duncan-Macdonell Chisholm, of Erchless Castle, co. Inverness, b. 5 Aug. 1811, inherited the estates of his family and the chieftainship of his clan, on the decease of his brother, 8 Sept. 1838; and d.

Lineage.—The antiquity of the CHISHOLMS in the Highlands of Scotland appears established beyond dispute. The reputed founder of the clan, HARALD, is stated in the History of Shetland and Orkney, to have been of the royal stock of Norway. Sir Robert Gordon calls this chief HARALD CHISHOLM, and however he acquired the surname, it is clearly the tradition that he bore it. The Chisholms of the North are known in their vernacular tongue by the appellation An Siosalach, "THE CHISHOLM," emphatically as the chief.

SIR ROBERT CHISHOLM, who became possessed of Quarrelwood, in right of his mother, the dau. and heir of Sir Robert Lauder, of Quarrelwood, acquired the office of constable of Urquhart Castle. He received the honour of knighthood, and was taken prisoner, with King DAVID, at the battle of Redhills, 17 Oct. 1346. He was ransomed, or otherwise obtained his liberty, and lived many years after. From Sir Robert Chisholm descended

ALEXANDER DE CHISHOLM, who m. Margaret, dau. of Lach-Mackintosh, of that ilk, and was father of THOMAS DE CHISHOLM, whose son, ALEXANDER DE CHISHOLM had (with two daus., one m. to Ewen Maclean, of Ardgour, and the other to Farquhar Farquharson, of Invercuisd) a son, UALAN, or WILAND DE CHISHOLM, of Comar, who lived about the year 1513, and was father of JAMES CHISHOLM, of Comar, A.D. 1538, whose son, ALEXANDER CHISHOLM, s. in 1555. He m. Janet, dau. of Kenneth Mackenzie, 10th baron of Kintail, and had two sons THOMAS, who d. s. p., and JOHN, who s. his brother in 1566, and m. the eldest dau. of Mackenzie of Coull, by whom he was father of ALEXANDER CHISHOLM, infert in 1630, whose son, by his wife, a dau. of Alexander Mackenzie, of Gairloch, was ALEXANDER CHISHOLM, who s. in 1677. He m. a dau. of Roderick Mackenzie, of Applecross, and left with a dau., Jean, wife of Sir Kenneth Mackenzie, of Coull a son and heir,

JOHN CHISHOLM, "The Chisholm," living at the close of the 17th century, who m. Jean, 3rd dau. of Sir Thomas Mackenzie, of Findon, and received a fortune with her in money, her eldest sister as heiress, carrying the lands to her husband, Sir Kenneth Mackenzie, of Seatwell. He was s. by his only son,

THE CHISHOLM, RODERICK, who m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Duncan Macdonell, of Glengurry, by whom he had five sons, viz., 1 ALEXANDER, his heir; 2 James, major in the 92nd Highlanders, d. w.m. in 1789; 3 William, provost of Inverness, d. in 1807, leaving two sons, Colin and Alexander, who both d. s. p. m.; 4 John, a captain in the army, d. w.m.; 5 Colin, a colonel in the army of Prince CHARLES, fell at Culloden, s. p. The chief m. 2ndly, Isabel, 2nd dau. of Sir Kenneth Mackenzie, of Scotwell, and had by her a dau., m. to Fraser of Culduthel. The Chisholm, with his clan, joined the Cavalier St. George in 1715, and Prince Charles in 1745. He d. in 1785, and was s. by his son.

THE CHISHOLM, ALEXANDER, who m. 1st, a dau. of Mackenzie of Applecross, and had two sons and two daus., viz., 1 Duncan, captain in the 71st, who d. 23 Oct. 1782, w.m.; 2 ALEXANDER, who s. his father. The elder dau., Margaret, m. Fraser of Dunbalooh; the younger, Mackenzie of Scotsburn. The chief m. 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of Mackenzie of Allangrange, and by her had a numerous family; of these, three sons and three daus. survived him. The eldest, Mary, m. William Robertson, of Kindness, and left issue; the 2nd m. General John Mackenzie; the 3rd m. w.m. Two of the sons d. abroad, and the youngest became eventually chief. The Chisholm was s. by his eldest surviving son.

THE CHISHOLM, ALEXANDER, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Doctor Wilson, of Edinburgh, and dying 7 Feb. 1793, aged 44, left an only child, MARY, who m. James Gooden, Esq., merchant of London, the estates and chieftainship devolving upon his youngest and only surviving half-brother.

THE CHISHOLM, WILLIAM, who m. 13 March, 1795, Eliza, eldest dau. of Duncan Macdonell, of Glengarry, by whom (he m. 2ndly, in 1819, Sir Thomas Ramsay, of Balmaln, bart.) he had issue,

ALEXANDER WILLIAM, his heir, b. in 1810.

DUNCAN MACDONELL, who s. his brother.

James, m. 1 Aug. 1841, to Edmund Batten, Esq., barrister-at-law, who has assumed the additional surname of CHISHOLM.

The chief d. 21 March, 1817, and was s. by his elder son.

THE CHISHOLM, ALEXANDER. This estimable chieftain, M.P. for Inverness-shire, d. prematurely, 8 Sept. 1838, w.m., and was s. by his brother, DUNCAN-MACDONELL CHISHOLM, The Chisholm.

CHISHOLME OF THAT ILK AND STIRCHES.

SCOTT-CHISHOLME, JOHN, Esq. of that ilk and Stirches, co. Roxburgh; m. Margaret, eldest dau. of the late Robert Walker, Esq. of Mumrill, co. Stirling, by Christina-Tytler, his wife, dau. of John Borthwick, of Newton, and has issue,

1. JOHN-JAMES.

1. Christina-Madeline.

1. Elizabeth Scott.

Mr. Chisholme s. to the estate of his maternal uncle, James Scott, of Whitehaugh, 1852, and was obliged to assume the additional surname of SCOTT.

Kinrag.—The genealogy of this old border family, with their designation of that ilk, is very clearly authenticated by their own and the public records.

In the Origines Parochiales Scotiæ it is stated, "The lands of Chisholme, in the county of Roxburgh, conferred the name in an early period on a family of consequence." Shaw says, "The name Chisholme is right ancient in the south, where Chisholme of that ilk has a good estate in Teviotdale," and now makes this reference: "I find Hugh Rose mentioned in a contract matrimonial betwixt him and Joneta De Chisholme, daughter to Sir Robert De Chisholme, constable of Truphart Castle, in the reign of DAVID II. He was also Chisholme of that ilk; and in right of his mother, daughter to Sir Robert Lauder, succeeded to Quarrelwood, Brightmanie, &c." In 1587, Walter Chisholme is recorded in the parliamentary roll of border chieftains on the "Middle March," and in 1589, his son is enrolled in the list of barons in the county of Roxburgh by the title of Walter Chisholme of that ilk. Sir George Mackenzie, king's advocate for Scotland in the reign of CHARLES II., affirms that, "Chisholme, the chief of this family, is Chisholme of that ilk, in the shire of Roxburgh." Their armorial bearings—Gules, a boar's head and neck, pendant, couped, argent, were emblazoned by Sir David Lindsay, Lyon king-of-arms, in the reign of JAMES IV.

Chisholme, the original seat of the family, is situated in the western district of Roxburghshire; it was formerly in the old deanery of Teviotdale, and diocese of Glasgow. The family are of Anglo-Norman origin. "They came," says Malcolm, "soon after the Conquest from Tindale in England. The original name is said to have been De Chesel, to which the Saxon termination holme was added on the marriage of the Norman ancestor with a Saxon heiress, whose lands from situation were so called." In the early records of the family, the name is written De Chesholme; in later times, De Cheshelme vel Chesholme; and eventually Chisholme.

The earliest documentary evidence, now extant, relating to the family, is a Bull of Pope ALEXANDER IV., in which John De Chisholme is named, anno 1254. About the same period he acquired, by marriage with the Norman family of De Vetereponte, the lands of Paxton, in the adjoining county of Berwick; for in the reign of ALEXANDER III., William De Vetereponte, Lord of Bolton, grants a charter of these lands, with the fishings of Brade-la-Tweed, and pendules in the village of Paxton, with the fishings and pertinents belonging thereto, to John De Chesholme, and to Emma De Vetereponte, his spouse. From that period, down to the present time, the history of the family is clearly established by their own and public records.

John was s. by

RICHARD DE CHESHOLME, who, soon after the commencement of the succession wars, submitted, with John, his son, afterwards Sir John, to EDWARD I., in 1296, as appears by the Ragman Roll. He was s. by his son,

JOHN DE CHESHOLME, who became an adherent of Robert Bruce, with whom he was present at the battle of Bannockburn, where his kinsman, Sir William De Vetereponte, was slain. In consequence of his defection, Sir John was forfeited by EDWARD II., who conferred a part of his possessions on Ranulphus De Home. In the mandate of EDWARD, which is dated at York, 18 April, 1317, Sir John is styled "our Scottish enemy and rebel." The family possessions were eventually restored and confirmed to this John, and to his heirs male, by a charter of Robert the Bruce, dated in the 14th year of his reign (anno 1320). Sir John m. Anne, dau. and heiress of Sir Robert Lauder, of Quarrelwood, constable of Urquhart Castle. Through this marriage the name was introduced into the north of Scotland, and established there by a member of the family, who m. Margaret De La Ard, co-heiress of the Ard, in the co. of Inverness. Sir John was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE CHESHOLME, who was knighted, and taken prisoner with DAVID II. at the battle of Durham, anno. 1346. His name is recorded in the long list of prisoners in the Fodera, 20 EDWARD III. On the death of his maternal grandfather, Sir Robert succeeded in right of his mother, to the Lauder estates, in the counties of Moray and Nairn; and in 1357, he was appointed, by DAVID II., constable of Urquhart Castle, and sheriff of Inverness, as appears by the Lord Chamberlain's Rolls of the period. Frequent mention is made of this Sir Robert, both in private and public records. He had three sons and one dau.,

1. ROBERT, who succeeded him.

2. Alexander, who m. Margaret De La Ard, co-heiress of the Ard, in the co. of Inverness. She is styled in an indenture of date 25 April, 1405, Margaret De La Ard, domina De Erchless. From this marriage derived CHISHOLME, of Erchless Castle, co. Inverness.

3. William, a churchman, and treasurer of Moray. His name often occurs in the register of Moray, from 1371 to 1399.

4. Joneta, who m. Hugh Rose, 4th Baron of Kilravock. Her marriage contract is dated 2 Jan. 1364, and witnessed by the Bishops of Moray and Ross, and William, Earl of Ross. In the contract, her father is designated as grandson of Sir Robert Lauder of Quarrelwood.

The eldest son,

ROBERT CHISHOLME, also styled Sir Robert, s. his father in 1384. He m. Margaret, dau. of Halliburton, of that ilk, co. Berwick, by whom he had two sons,

1. JOHN, who succeeded him.

2. ROBERT, who succeeded his brother.

JOHN CHISHOLME, the elder son, styled by Sir George Mackenzie, "John Chesholme, of that ilk, in the shire of Roxburgh," m. Catherine, dau. of Bisset, of that ilk; and d. 1436, without heirs male of his body, leaving an only dan., Morella De Chisholme, who m. Alexander Sutherland, of

Duffus, grandson of Nicolas Sutherland, 2nd son of Kenneth, Earl of Sutherland, killed at the battle of Halidon, anno 1333. Morella succeeded to the estates in Moray and Nairn, acquired by her great-grandfather, by his marriage with the heiress of Sir Robert Lauder, of Quarrelwood; but the border estates in Roxburgh and Berwick, being male fees, talked on heirs male, she was excluded from them, and they devolved on

ROBERT DE CHESHOLME, her father's brother, as next heir male, so returned in 1436. He m. Marion, dau. of Sir William Douglas, of Drumlanrig, by whom he had four sons,

- i. JOHN, who succeeded him.
- ii. Robert, who d. unm.
- iii. William, a churchman, and eventually vicar of Pettin.
- iv. Edmund, who founded the family of Cromlix, in the co. of Perth. This branch became hereditary bailies and justiciaries of the ecclesiastical lordship of Dunblane. The Cromlix branch attained to wealth and power; it produced many knights and churchmen, four of whom were bishops; but it terminated, in the reign of CHARLES II., in an heiress, who conveyed the estates, through marriage, to General Drummond, Lord Madderty, ancestor of Viscount Strathallan.

The eldest son,

JOHN CHESHOLME, of that ilk, m. (contract dated 8 May, 1442) Janet, dau. of Erskine, of Rodholm, and had, with several other children, a son and heir,

ROBERT CHISHOLME, baron of Chesholme, who m. Janet, dau. of Elliot of Lariston, co. Roxburgh, and had by her three sons and one dau.,

- i. ROBERT, slain at Flodden, anno 1513.
- ii. John, who succeeded him, but d. unm.
- iii. George, who succeeded his brother.
- iv. Mary, who, according to Satchells, m. William Scott, first of Harden, ancestor of Lord Polwarth.

The youngest son,

GEORGE CHISHOLME, of that ilk, m. 15 June, 1517, Elizabeth, dau. of John Langlands, of that ilk, co. Roxburgh. He engaged, with Scott of Buccleuch, and other border chieftains, at the instigation of JAMES V., to relieve him from under the iron tutelage of the Earl of Angus. The result was the battle of Melrose, 1526, in which they were defeated, and the principal chieftains forfeited; among these, George Chisholme, of that ilk, was cited to appear before the High Court of Justiciary, for the slaughter of Kerr, of Cessford, chief of the clan Kerr in the battle of Melrose, as appears by the warrant preserved among the records of the court, and quoted by Pitcairn in his criminal trials. Sir Walter Scott, in his account of the battle, ascribes the slaughter of Kerr, to Elliot of Stobs, which is erroneous. The name of Elliot is not in the warrant, nor in any of the bonds entered into for staunching the feud to which the battle gave rise. On the accession of JAMES V., the forfeited chieftains obtained remission, and George Chisholme had a charter of the lands of Chisholme, Chisholme Midon, Mouslie, Woodburn, Merryneir, &c., dated at Edinburgh, 12 Nov. 1531. He had four sons and two daus.,

- i. WALTER, who succeeded him.
- ii. John, for several years a political agent for Queen Mary at the French Court: to him, on the 18th April, 1567, her majesty granted the lands of Kingswerk, &c. His name frequently occurs in the diary of John Leslie, bishop of Ross, in connection with the wars of the period. In 1571, on returning from France with a supply of arms and money for the Queen, he was captured by the reformers at Leith, and cruelly tortured, of which an account is given by Richard Bannatyne, amanuensis to John Knox; and also by Crawford, in his memoirs. He eventually escaped to Edinburgh Castle, which he assisted his friend, the celebrated Kirkaldy, of Grange, to defend. On the accession of JAMES VI., he was appointed comptroller of the artillery, and had his estate restored and confirmed to him by Act of Parliament in 1592.
- iii. William, a churchman in the abbey of Melrose, a portion of the ruins of which still bear the name of Chisholme's Tower.
- iv. Alexander, styled of Park-hill, in the co. of Roxburgh. He m. the 7th dau. of Walter Scott, of Synton, and first of Whitelade. This branch terminated in an heiress, Barbara Chesholme, who d. unm. about the middle of the last century.
- v. Elizabeth, who m. William Scott, of Hassendean, and had issue.
- vi. Mary, who d. unm.

The eldest son,

WALTER CHISHOLME, s. his father, George. He was infert in the estate 13 March, 1538. He was a loyal subject to Queen Mary, and was actively engaged in her cause during the civil wars of that unhappy period. He was involved in the desperate feud which raged for years on the border between the clans of Scott and Kerr, with their friends and allies on both sides, caused by the battle of Melrose, in which his father had been accused of the slaughter of Kerr of Cessford. In the justiciary records, 25 June, 1537, he was cited to appear under the pains of high treason, along with dame Janet Beaton, Lady Buccleuch (widow of the celebrated Sir Walter Scott, of Buccleuch, who was murdered in the streets of Edinburgh, in 1552, by a party of the Kerrs), for a raid against Sir Peter Cranston, one of their allies, on which occasion they burned St. Mary's, of the Lowes. The feud was eventually stanchied by the principal parties entering into a bond, dated at Melrose, 26 Feb. 1568, to which his signature and title is adhibited thus, Walter Chisholme, of that ilk. He is enrolled as one of the border chieftains on the "Middle March" in the Parliamentary Roll, 1587. He d. in 1588, leaving two sons,

- i. WALTER, who succeeded him.
- ii. James, styled of Hayerhope, in the co. of Peebles. He was one of the body guards of JAMES VI., composed of the sons of noblemen and barons. This branch is now extinct.

The eldest son,

WALTER CHISHOLME, of Chisholme, was infert in the estate 17 Feb. 1589. He m. Margaret, dau. of John Graham, of Wark; and d. 1618, leaving an only son, WALTER CHISHOLME, of that ilk, was infert in the estate 15 Dec. 1623. He m. a lady named Margaret Stirling. This Walter was a staunch royalist, and served in the royal army during the great civil war. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Preston in 1648, and after a long confinement in Lancaster Castle his estate was sequestered, and he was exiled the kingdom. After enduring great privation, he d. at Breda, in 1652. He had two sons, Walter, the eldest; and William, who settled in the north of England.

The elder son,

WALTER CHISHOLME, 15th of that ilk, and first of Stirches, m. Margaret, only dau. of James Balderstone, Esq., and had two sons,

- i. WILLIAM, b. 11 Jan. 1652.
- ii. Robert, b. 3 July, 1653. He became sheriff-clerk of Selkirkshire, and founded the family of Chisholme, of Selkirk, one of whom (William), having made a fortune in India, purchased the estate of Chisholme about 1784, from Sir James Stewart, of Coltness. He was s. by his only son, Charles, who d. without issue in 1834, when the estate devolved on his cousin, Scott, of Coldhouse, co. Roxburgh, through his mother, Margaret Chisholme, sister of the purchaser. On the accession of Scott, of Coldhouse, he assumed the name of Chisholme.

The elder son,

WILLIAM CHISHOLME, s. his father in 1681. He m. Mary, only dau. of James Brotherstone, of Glencairn, and dying 1707, left issue,

- i. JOHN, b. 11 Sept. 1682.
- ii. Mary, b. 9 Aug. 1684; m. 25 Oct. 1708, William Oliver, of Dinlebyre, to whom she had issue, JOHN, and Mary, who m. John Scott, of Synton.

The son and heir,

JOHN CHISHOLME, of that ilk and Stirches, s. his father. He m. 4 Feb. 1708, Mary, 2nd dau. of John Oliver, of Dinlebyre, in the co. of Roxburgh; and d. 17 July, 1755, having had issue six children, three only of whom survived childhood, viz.,

- i. JOHN, b. 9 April, 1713.
- ii. William, b. 14 June, 1715.
- iii. Agnes, b. 7 Oct. 1708; m. 18 Aug. 1735, the Rev. John Clunie, of Whytebank, and had issue.

The elder son,

JOHN CHISHOLME, of that ilk and Stirches, s. his father in 1755. He m. 5 Aug. 1736, Margaret, eldest dau. of Alexander Scott, of Synton, co. Roxburgh. Her mother was Magdalene, dau. of Sir William Elliot, of Stobs, Baronet, aunt of General Augustus Elliot, Lord Heathfield. Her maternal grandmother was Ann, dau. of Sir William Douglas, of Cavers. John Chisholme d. 1784, having had issue,

- i. JOHN, b. 13 Oct. 1737, a capt 79th regt., and aide-de-camp to General Sir William Draper. He was killed at Arcot, in India, in 1761, unm.
- ii. Alexander, b. 12 Feb. 1741; d. 17 Nov. 1743.
- iii. GILBERT, b. 1 June, 1748.
- iv. William, b. 5 Aug. 1749, a capt. in the 51st regt.; d. without issue.

The third son,

GILBERT CHISHOLME, of that ilk and Stirches, s. his father in 1784. He m. 21 July, 1768, Christina, 2nd dau. of

Michael Anderson, of Tushilaw, co. Selkirk (her mother was Janet, sister of Sir James Nasmyth, Bart. of Posso). By this lady, who d. 1800, he had no issue. He m. 2ndly, 17 Aug. 1802, Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of John Scott, of Whitehaugh,* on Roxburgh (her mother was Margaret, eldest dau. and co-heiress of Walter Scott, of Newton Chamberlain, in the same county). Gilbert Chisholme d. in 1820. He had issue,

1. John, his successor, now of that ilk and Stirches.
2. Gilbert, who d. in 1820.
3. Margaret-Scott, who d. 1854.
4. Christina-Anderson.

CHOLMLEY OF WHITBY AND HOWSHAM.

CHOLMLEY, GEORGE, Esq. of Whitby and Howsham, co. York, s. his father in 1809; m. in 1824, Hannah, dau. of John-Robinson Foulis, Esq. of Beckton.

Lineage.—This is a branch of the ancient Cheshire stock of Cholmondeley, springing from ROBERT, younger son of Hugh de Cholmondeley, deputy-serjeant of Cheshire, temp. EDWARD I. His great-great-grandson, SIR RICHARD CHOLMLEY, Knt. of Roxby, purchased in 1541, a lease for twenty-one years, of the abbey lands of Whitby, and subsequently obtained a grant of all the possessions of the monastery there. This gallant soldier, who was knighted at Leith, in 1544, m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Lord Conyers, and had by her, with three daus., as many sons, viz., FRANCIS, his heir; ROGER, ancestor of the CHOLMEYS of Brandisby; and Richard. He m. 2ndly, Lady Katharine Clifford, dau. of Henry, 1st Earl of Cumberland, and widow of John, Lord Scrope of Bolton, by whom he had a son, HENRY, successor to his brother Francis. Sir Richard's eldest son, SIR FRANCIS CHOLMLEY, Knt. of Whitby, d. s. p. in 1579, and was s., under the entail of his father's will, by his youngest brother, SIR HENRY CHOLMLEY, Knt. of Whitby and Roxby, father of SIR RICHARD CHOLMLEY, Knt. of Whitby, M.P. for Scarborough in 1620, who m. twice.
